Profits Tax Restricted As Deadlock Is Broken

Some Aid to Business Is Seen in Compromise by Conference.

Flat Impost Set On Capital Gains

Roosevelt Wins but Half Aims as House and Senate Split.

By Robert C. Albright.

An eight-day deadlock on the Administration's tax bill was dramatically broken late yesterday when Congressional conferees agreed to retain a fragment of the undivided profits tax principle and to impose flat taxation instead of graduated levies on capital gains.

But the conference put a two-year limit on the life of the abbreviated earnings tax principle, making it applicable to company income only in the 1938 and 1939 calendar years. Senate managers who insisted on the limitation said it will put the issue up to the country in the next elections and permit Congress to make adjustments when it returns next year.

The compromise followed six hours of continuous session, during which weary conferees refused to leave the room for food. Even Treasury and House experts were barred from the conference. At 4:30 p. m. the doors were swung open and newsmen entered.

"This is not completely satisfactory to me, but it is the best we could do," said Chairman Pat Harrison, of the Senate conferees. "The country wanted relief from the present law, and this will give that."

Profit Tax Narrowed.

The undivided profits tax was narrowed to a spread from 19 per cent on income of companies that withhold all dividends, down to 16⅔ per cent on concerns that distribute all their earnings to shareholders.

It was a concession to the House and to President Roosevelt, who had demanded retention of the profits tax principle. But the spread of the tax was sharply modified from the 16 to 20 per cent range in the House bill and the drastic 7 to 27 per cent levy in the present law. Low flat rates were granted corporations earning less than $25,000.

President Roosevelt and the House met a setback in their capital gains tax demands, under the conference agreement. With some

Clear Weather To Rule Capital Over Week-End

Fair weather, with clear skies and rising temperatures beckoning Washingtonians out of doors for hiking, motoring and golf, seems likely for the week-end, officials at the Weather Bureau said last night.

Yesterday's mugginess and gray skies will vanish today, the bureau predicted, but little change in temperature is expected until tomorrow.

The lowest temperature yesterday was 59, recorded at 7 a. m., with the highest 62, recorded at 3:45 p. m.

DR. JACOB VINER.

'Tired of Job' With Treasury, Viner Explains

By William V. Nessly.

Dr. Jacob Viner, special assistant to the Secretary of the Treasury, has resigned because of dissatisfaction "with the way things have been going in the country," he told The Post last night.

"I haven't for some time liked the way things were going," he said in a long-distance interview from his home at Chicago, "and I decided that the thing for me to do was to get out of the Treasury, come back to the University of Chicago, and leave the salvation of the world to others."

He added that he had become "tired of his job."

Brushes Questions Aside.

Declining to be more specific, he brushed aside questions as to whether his dissatisfaction was due to or had crystallized with the Administration's new spending-lending recovery program. Saying that any further word on his resignation must come from the Treasury Department, he added that he was maintaining a policy of not talking "for the time being." Pressed as to whether that indicated he would discuss the situation later, he replied:

"I haven't made up my mind yet."

While saying he had "no complaint with the Treasury itself," in leaving his position Dr. Viner apparently had joined the parade of

Roosevelt to Sail Friday on Cruiser

President Roosevelt revealed yesterday that he plans to leave the Capital next Friday for a short cruise off Charleston, S. C. He said the purpose would be twofold—to look over the new cruiser Philadelphia, on which he would cruise, and to catch up on reading reports.

The President declared with a laugh that his aim was to get as far away as possible from telephones, callers and the press.

Rules Committee Democrats Split

Drafters Stress Need of Action to Stop Pay Cuts in Slump.

By Sidney Olson.

The year-old Congressional war over wage-hour legislation headed into a new battle yesterday, with four conservative House Republicans holding the fate of the bill.

The House Labor Committee reported its latest version of the measure in the form of an "escalator-type" bill which sets a ceiling on hours at 44 per week and a floor on wages at 25 cents an hour.

Wages would be stepped up 5 cents an hour each year for three years to reach the final level of 40 cents per hour; hours would be reduced two hours per week each year until the 40-hour work week was attained.

Political Effect Studied.

The four Republicans who control the bill's future are all members of the House Rules Committee. They are Joseph W. Martin, of Massachusetts; Carl E. Mapes, of Michigan; J. Will Taylor, of Tennessee, and Donald H. McLean, of New Jersey.

While the Labor Committee's report pleaded for enactment on the basis the act would halt the "vicious spiral deflation" and would prevent salary-slashing during the depression, the 14 Rules Committee members, whose approval is necessary to permit the bill to reach the House floor, were studying the bill from political angles as well as economic possibilities.

Democrats Are Split.

The situation was this: The committee's 10 Democrats are split on the issue. Five are die-hard Southern Democrats, the men who combined last year with the four Republicans to lock up the bill for many months until it was blasted loose through the petition route. These are Eugene E. Cox, of Georgia; William J. Driver, of Arkansas; Howard W. Smith, of Virginia; J. Bayard Clark, of North Carolina, and Martin Dies, of Texas.

Four Democrats have consistently gone along with the Administration on this issue, Chairman John O'Connor, of New York, who led the opposition to the President's Government reorganization bill; Adolph J. Sabath, of Illinois; Arthur H. Greenwood, of Indiana, and Byron B. Harlan, of Ohio.

Won't Try Petition.

As long as the four Republicans combine with the five Southern Democrats the bill is pigeon-holed and therefore dead, as Labor Committee Chairman Mary T. Norton, of New Jersey, swears she will not use the petition route again to shake the bill loose.

But a new strategy has been discussed extensively throughout the House Republican bloc. This scheme would be to deliver the four Republican votes to the Administration, making a 1-vote majority; get the bill to the floor; give it enough

Roosevelt Won to Borah Plan For Licensing of Monopolies

By the Associated Press.

Senator Borah's proposal for enforcing the antitrust laws through Federal licensing of corporations assumed new importance last night in the light of a statement by President Roosevelt that he and Borah were in substantial agreement on the monopoly issue.

Announcing that before another week elapsed he would send to Congress his long-awaited message on tightening the antimonopoly laws, the President told reporters he had discussed the question with the Senator and that their opinions on all its phases coincided largely.

There still was no positive word as to whether the President would ask legislative action at this session or merely suggest a Congressional investigation.

Borah, the veteran Idaho Republican, said after a conference with Mr. Roosevelt yesterday that he wanted to shape his antimonopoly bill "in harmony with the Administration's program so we can get somewhere."

The President disclosed also at his press conference today that he would send to Congress shortly a previously announced message on making State and Federal salaries and the income from future issues of State and Federal bonds taxable by both the States and the Federal Government. This message, White House aides said, probably will go to the Capitol on Monday.

These two communications, fol-

Coercion Inquiry.

By the Associated Press.

The Works Progress Administration last night ordered an investigation of charges made by John B. Kelly, Philadelphia Democratic chairman, that Senator Guffey (Democrat), Pennsylvania, attempted to influence WPA workers for political purposes.

Aubrey Williams, deputy WPA administrator, called on Kelly for "any specific information" and promised that "specific charges will be immediately investigated and, if found true, summary action will be taken."

Williams said he would send a special representative to see Kelly.

He acted after the White House turned over to him a telegram Kelly sent earlier in the day asking that the Federal Bureau of Investigation look into the Philadelphia leader's charges.

Representative Walter (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, earlier in the day made countercharges of WPA vote coercion against Kelly. He said that when he heard that Kelly had asked for an FBI investigation "I called the White House and joined in the request, because if there is any coercion of the WPA it's coming from Kelly's mob."

Walter said he had "undeniable evidence" that a disabled war veteran who sought a WPA job at the Philadelphia Navy Yard had to go first to "Kelly's political office" for an indorsement.

Walter also said he had evidence Registration Commissioner McDermott of Philadelphia told Joseph Baker, of Philadelphia, his wife would lose her job as forelady on a WPA sewing project unless she supported Charles Alvin Jones, the State committee choice for the

$15,000 Vanished From Her Funds, Simone Declares

Hollywood, April 22 (U.P.).—The district attorney's office announced tonight it was investigating a complaint of Simone Simon, tempestuous young French screen actress, that she had discovered a shortage of between $15,000 and $50,000 in her bank account.

Capt. John Klein, head of the district attorney's bureau of investigation, said he expected to "clear up the case" early next week."

He said the actress was suspicious of a woman who she believed had forged her power of attorney while she was in Europe and had drawn heavily against her bank account.

Taierhchwang, April 22, 1:10 p. m.—There is every indication the imperial Japanese army has unleashed a smashing drive in south Shantung Province which may end in the evacuation of Suchow by the Chinese.

The Chinese now have been in retreat for more than 24 hours and this morning the Japanese battered their way into positions within eight miles of this shell-wrecked walled town which was captured earlier this month in the greatest Chinese victory of the war.

Gen. Li Tsung-jen, Chinese commander, makes no secret of the seriousness of the situation. He asserts the Japanese have thrown eight divisions (about 100,000 men) into the offensive.

This correspondent reached Taierhchwang at noon after retreating with a Chinese column which had been operating around Yihsien, just north of this railway terminus.

There is heavy fighting throughout the whole railway triangle of which Suchow is the apex as this dispatch is filed.

The Chinese column to which this correspondent is attached began retreating from the Yihsien sector, where a large body of Japanese soldiers was entrapped, Wednesday after Japanese mechanized units had come up over repaired roads in a surprise attack.

There was heavy fighting Tuesday with the Chinese continuing their offensive between Yihsien and Tsaochwang. The Chinese were attempting to capture a mountain

600 Rally Here To Get Out Vote For Suffrage

Citizens Conference Goes on Record in Favor of Self-Government.

With a quickening of campaign tempo heralding the approach of Washington's first opportunity to mark a ballot in 67 years, 600 citizens rallied last night in Central High School to formulate plans for getting out the vote in the suffrage referendum April 30 and to demand "a republican form of government for the District."

A resolution adopted by an overwhelming majority of the 271 delegates from civic organizations placed the Citizens Confrence on District Suffrage on record in favor of national representation and local self-government, as defined in the Lewis-Randolph Resolution, now pending in Congress.

Recognizing that attainment of these aims requires a constitutional amendment, the resolution advocated that in the meantime the conference work for:

"Reorganization of the District government into a modern, efficient and economical municipal government, with adequate provision for effective participation by District citizens in the election and control of such government, consistent with the present Congressional power of exclusive legislation over the seat of government."

The cause of voteless District residents was likened to that of the embattled colonists of 1776 in a speech by Wilbur S. Finch, chairman of the conference and president of the District Suffrage Association.

"Read the Declaration of Independence," Finch said, "and note the similarity of present conditions in the District to the fundamental causes set out in that instrument as a justification for the bloody struggle between our forebears and their cousins across the sea.

(Other D. A. R. news, Page 21)

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

The Post Club Editor.

Warning against the absolutism of a majority or an aggressive minority as a more serious menace than that of a dictator, Merle Thorpe, editor of the Nation's Business, last night addressed the Daughters of the American Revolution at their forty-seventh Continental Congress.

Concentration of authority in the executive arm of the Government leads to the tyranny of bureaucrats, he declared.

"Look about you before you leave. You will discover that there are in reality two governments in Washington," he said. "One is the regular constitutional establishment in which the law-making function is assigned to Congress. The other is the rapidly growing conglomeration of bureaus and commissions which exercise all three governmental functions—the legislative, executive and judicial. Under the guise of executive orders or regulations, they are proclaiming laws in an unending stream, telling the American people what they may do and what they may not do.

"It is a paradoxical fact that many of those who proudly call themselves 100 per cent Americans are quick to espouse measures aimed at the reproduction of conditions

Editors Reaffirm Their Duty To Public Interest, Good Taste

The American Society of Newspaper Editors late yesterday adopted a restatement of its original aims and ideals, calling on all editors to be governed "by good taste, by a sense of justice" and by a "complete devotion to the public interest."

It also pledged editors to educate readers to a sense of the value of a free press in America.

Grove Patterson, of the Toledo Blade, read the restatement, which recalled that the society, at its first meeting in 1922, adopted the Canons of Journalism. Those canons, he said, were true then and they are true now.

"Since the Canons of Journalism were adopted, however," the statement said, "many changes have come in the status of newspapers. The steady encroachments of governmental censorship have utterly destroyed the freedom of the press in those countries wherein live three-fourths of the people of the European continent.

"In the United States, in this period of 15 years since the adoption of the Canons of Journalism, we have observed outstanding developments in respect to the press and its relation to the public. Those very improvements in the means for gathering and transmitting news, the new excellence in mechanical devices for the display of news, the wider use of commentating columnists, and last, but by no means least, the immense devel-

Nine Bodies Recovered; Hurtling Motor Kills Two Outside.

House Shattered, Autoists Imperiled

Rescuers From 2 States Battle Way Through Throng of 7,000.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Grundy, Va., April 22.—An estimated 75 miners were entombed behind hundreds of tons of debris by a terrific explosion which shattered two tunnels of the Keen Mountain mine of the Red Jacket Coal Co. here at 4:45 p. m. today.

Nine bodies were recovered by midnight, and little hope was held that any of the men buried would be found alive.

Three other men were burned badly by flames which roared 200 feet from the main entrance of the mine, just as shifts were being changed. Two men killed were outside the mine tunnels but were torn beyond recognition by the blast.

Five rescue crews had reached the isolated mine and were at work by midnight. They reported intense heat near where seven bodies were found heaped together near the entrance and said they believed a fierce fire was raging farther back in the tunnel.

Two Decapitated.

John Blevins, mine motorman, and an unidentified man were decapitated. The other men were mutilated. The two outside were crushed by a huge motor employed in hauling cars to the mouth of the mine, which, with two other motors, was torn from its moorings and hurled 300 yards down the mountainside.

Witnesses said timbers, rocks and earth were flung high into the air. Hobart Harman, mine foreman and Buchanan County justice of the peace, said he saw timbers "just raining" down the mountain after the blast.

Nearby House Shattered.

"You couldn't describe it," said Ed Harris, a miner who was outside the tunnels. "One minute we were there busy and the next everything was in a mess. It's hard to think just what happened."

Harman said he and others felt the concussion 1,400 yards away. A house near the entry was shattered, merchandise was thrown from the shelves of a store a mile and a quarter distant, seven motorists on a road nearby were endangered when the blast all but swept their automobiles from the highway.

Taxes Must Pay For Spending, Landon Warns

Asks 'Articulate Citizenry' to Let Congress Know Their Opposition.

By the Associated Press.

Topeka, Kans., April 22.—Alf M. Landon called upon "an articulate citizenry" today to make it clear to Congress that "this huge appropriation" proposed in President Roosevelt's new recovery program must be met by adequate tax provisions.

The 1936 Republican Presidential nominee said the President's proposal has ended the "period of uncertainty" as to the Government's fiscal policy.

"We are again upon an inflationary course," he said.

Landon's speech was read to the Optimist Club here by State Supreme Court Justice Hugo T. Wedell after Landon was called to Kansas City by the illness of his father, John M. Landon.

"Bankruptcy" Feared.

"If every time there is a recession in business the only way out that a government can find is a further huge expenditure program to be applied on top of expenditures already too great, then we shall go bankrupt," the address continued.

"If the Government spends money, it must collect revenues to match the expenditures . . .

"It is not yet too late to pull up and save ourselves and pay our honest debts. We can pay the public debt of these United States if we are honest and economical. But we will have to economize—we have to stop our spendthrift course."

The Nation's hope, he said, "lies in Congress, backed by an articulate citizenry. To continue to take action and assume leadership.

"Congress must decide if we are to take the hard road, or if we shall dash gaily and blindly into this intoxicated hilarity of inflation by meeting our current expenditures for the ninth successive year with I. O. U.'s."

All responsibility, Landon said, must not be placed upon Congress, and the citizenry must not be "indifferent."

Citizens Urged to Speak.

"It has already been proven conclusively that when the people want something, and want it badly enough, they can get the Congress to follow their directions. . . .

"If those who are against these inflationary measures haven't the courage to say so openly, they can't blame their representatives in Congress for listening to the clamor for more reckless spending."

President Roosevelt "is gambling," he said, "that he can raise the national income by a policy of Government spending.

"But this program is the opposite pledged by his Secretary of the Treasury only five months ago. With several ways to check the depression, the President has chosen the one that the record of his Administration shows will not work."

Recovery from an unsound fiscal policy cannot be accomplished in "the short 'breathing spells' which the Administration threateningly allowed business," Landon said.

"If we are to work our way back to a sound basis, it would mean the Government must levy an enormous increase of taxes to bring the budget into balance."

Such a course, Landon said, would require "courage."

"The further we go in the direction we are now heading, the longer and more severe will be the period of suffering when we attempt to go in reverse—or, if we do not reverse, when we come to the inevitable crash."

Even without accompanying inflationary steps, he said, any spending program by the Federal Government is in itself inflationary.

"The German inflation took eight years to destroy 90 per cent of the mark without the German people realizing what was going on. Then came the dramatic period . . . which wiped out most of the rest of the mark," Landon cited as an example.

Landon said he hoped he exaggerated the dangers, "but I am afraid I do not."

Glenn Frank's Views.

Cleveland, April 22 (AP).—Glenn Frank, chairman of the Republican Party reorganization committee, declared today "we are going to keep government the servant, not the sovereign, of our lives."

"We Americans have been wandering in a desert of indecision," the former University of Wisconsin president said in an address before Rotary clubs.

"At one time or another in recent years we have been playing with three ideas—the idea of individual enterprise, the idea of voluntary group action, and the idea of state management."

"I do not believe that we are going to deliver America back to the unbridled individualism of pioneer days. I do not believe we are going to deliver America into the hands of a succession of voluntary groups who manage to accumulate power, whether it be our farm organizations, our labor organizations, or the trade associations of our businessmen, and I do not believe we are going to sell ourselves into slavery to the state.

Knox Assails New Plan.

Wichita, Kan., April 22 (AP).—Suspension of Social Security payments in order to release a billion and a half dollars immediately through private channels for reemployment was urged here tonight by Col. Frank Knox in an address denouncing President Roosevelt's new recovery program.

The 1936 Republican Vice-Presidential nominee, emphasizing "I am a candidate for nothing on earth," said the Roosevelt program was inflationary, tied up politically with this year's Congressional races and offered nothing private capital was not prepared to do.

Knox said a continuation of Social Security would amount to savings for a future depression in the midst of a present one, for which he held President Roosevelt accountable.

He said the credit expansion phase of the President's new program constituted a "sheer and deliberate invitation to inflate."

"It would be just as sensible," he declared, "to advocate the repeal of laws against the importation of foreign labor while we have 12,000,000 unemployed of our own as it is to add ten billion dollars more of credit when we have billions of credit now unused."

Flood Control Law Putting Burden on Communities Apparently Doomed in the House.

WHITTINGTON.

The long-opposed provision in the flood control laws that communities must pay for land, rights-of-way and damages for reservoir sites apparently is doomed. House Flood Control Committee members, headed by Chairman Whittington (Democrat), of Mississippi, were said yesterday to have agreed informally to recommend the end of the requirement.

The committee has completed hearings on some $1,000,000,000 worth of projects approved by Army engineers, and Whittington said the group would draft legislation authorizing a program to cost $300,000,000 or more. Action on the authorization will be sought at this session, though appropriations are considered unlikely before next year. It has been indicated that efforts would be made to allot public works funds for projects in whatever program is agreed on at this session.

The Congress will have to wait a while for the President's contemplated message on the world phosphate situation. Mr. Roosevelt, asked at his press conference yesterday if he still intended to send such a message, disclosed that a packet of his papers was missing. He laughed when he declared he was in an embarrassing position because the papers seemed to have disappeared between the Department of Agriculture and the White House.

Halls of the Capitol resounded to few footfalls yesterday, with both Houses of Congress in recess and 220 members absent, attending the fifth annual azalea festival in Charleston, S. C. House Majority Leader Rayburn, of Texas, and Minority Leader Snell, of New York, were speakers at a midday luncheon at the festival, while Vice President Garner and Secretary of Commerce Roper were among the other notable guests. The Vice President last night crowned Miss Margaret Fell Lyon as Miss Charleston.

Van Nuys Hits, Murphy Lauds Spending Plan

Recovery Move Evokes Dispute as President Sees Leaders.

Denunciation and defense came yesterday for the President's new $4,500,000,000 recovery plan, as he continued his conferences with business leaders, seeking an end to the business slump.

Senator Frederick Van Nuys (Democrat), of Indiana, assailed the program as "socialistic," leading to "political and economic chaos" and a "short-sighted, iridescent dream."

On the other hand, Gov. Frank Murphy of Michigan said the vast plan was "America's first need today" in the face of a "grim emergency."

As though emphasizing the need for some action, Secretary of Labor Perkins issued a report showing that 50,000 fewer workers were employed in March than in February, though usually there is a seasonal employment increase of 200,000 to 300,000 persons in March. It was the sixth consecutive month there had been a downward trend, she said.

There was one optimistic note in the picture, however. Weekly factory pay rolls showed a gain of $200,000 despite the drop in total employment.

Sees Biggers, Canada.

The President conferred with John D. Biggers, president of the Libby-Owens Glass Co., who conducted the Federal unemployment census, and with Ward Canada, Toledo business man who offered a plan to stimulate the used car market. Next Wednesday Mr. Roosevelt will see Henry Ford, auto manufacturer, who in the past has frequently been critical of New Deal undertakings. Conferences with other business men will follow, though the President said yesterday he has not completed an invitation list.

An agreement to continue WPA rolls at their present level—2,600,000 persons—until the new appropriation of $1,250,000,000 for the seven months beginning July 1 becomes available, was reached at conference with Aubrey Williams, deputy WPA administrator. If Congress approves the new appropriation, Mr. William said, rolls would be stepped up to 2,800,000.

Limitation Protested.

A delegation representing 25 white-collar projects in New York protested to WPA officials against the new ruling limiting project costs to $1,000 a year for each worker.

A delegation contended that such a liquidation would mean "liquidation of the white-collar projects," since large outlays aside from wages are required to keep them going. Nels Anderson, assistant administrator in charge of white-collar projects, conceded that the ruling probably would work a hardship on employes of the project, but that the limitation was necessitated by lack of funds.

Gov. Murphy made his statements in a Nation-wide radio talk while Senator Van Nuys' criticisms came in a public statement. The latter said that "explosive and unfounded public utterances" of some high officials have done "more to bring on the present so-called recession than all other contributing causes combined."

A group of House liberals, led by Representative Schneider (Progressive), Wisconsin, agreed yesterday to demand that at least $100,000,000 of relief funds recently recommended by the President be earmarked for rural electrification projects.

"We are not satisfied entirely with the relief program," said Representative Schneider, one of the committee, "because it gives no definite attention to rural electrification."

Utilities Reject Loans.

St. Louis, April 22 (AP).—Louis H. Egan, president of the Union Electric Co., of Missouri, told the Missouri Association of Public Utilities yesterday that the industry does not want Federal loans from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

"Any utility which has behaved itself and kept sound credit can get all the money it needs from other sources," Egan declared. "I predict that all the RFC loans to the electric light and power business won't amount to a shout in a rain barrel."

Ford Favors Small Plants.

Sudbury, Mass., April 22 (AP).—Declaring the small plant was the answer to considerable industrial difficulty, Henry Ford, Detroit motor car manufacturer, said today he was planning to open a small factory in South Sudbury to make a certain part for his automobiles.

In an interview at the Wayside Inn, where he is spending two days prior to a trip to Washington for a conference with the President on April 27, Ford said the industrial future of New England looked bright, "provided the manufacturers decentralize and make use of water power for smaller plants."

"We are going to build a little plant here in Sudbury. We will use water power and make some small part for our motor car, something that won't offer transportation trouble," he said.

Garner Declares 'Boss' Roosevelt Understands Him

Charleston, S. C., April 22 (AP).—Apparently replying to reports of a rift between himself and President Roosevelt, Vice President John N. Garner said today there was an my boss, for whom there is no my boss," for whom there is no man standing in this hall who has a greater affection than myself."

Speaking at the mayor's luncheon opening the Azalea festival, Garner said: "I sometimes disagree with my wife and my friends, but that does not take away my love and affection for them."

'Irate Readers' Attributed to ImprovedPress

Custom of Presenting Both Sides Excites Reaction, Cross Points Out,

Harold L. Cross, secretary and general counsel of the New York Herald Tribune, told the American Society of Newspaper Editors how the "irate subscriber" gets that way.

To begin with, he contrasted the modern newspaper with the political organ of old. A couple of generations ago, he said, people wanted to read partisan news; they wanted their heroes played up and their enemies played down. Newspapers in those days, he recalled, made no effort to hide their partisanship, and the readers liked them all the more for it.

Cites War in Spain.

The modern newspaper, Cross pointed out, seeks to present the news objectively, giving both sides so that the reader may draw his own decision. But this very improvement in service, he added, makes for irate subscribers.

"Take the case of the war in Spain," he said. "There are complaints that too little or too much is printed about Franco or the Loyalists, as the case may be."

A large class of the readers, Cross said, feel that the newspapers have gone too far in invading the rights of privacy through using candid camera pictures and pictures that "mysteriously disappeared."

Cross expressed the opinion that large American newspapers had far too much news that was of "no legitimate concern." Granting that some readers crave such news, he argued it would be better to let their craving go unsatisfied.

Other Complaints.

He said other complaints came from readers who felt that the policies of the owner and publisher too often were reflected in the news columns.

He said that, primarily, there were two types of "irate subscribers"—the type that writes indignant letters to the editor and the type that "takes it out in silence." The latter, he said, is the most dangerous from the editor's point of view. Cross said that irate subscribers often were valuable to a newspaper, and prescribed ways of dealing with them.

Aiken Assails Hamilton for Fight on Relief

'Bad Psychology' for Party to Oppose Job Funds, Governor Says.

By the Associated Press.

Hanover, N. H., April 22.—Gov. George D. Aiken, of Vermont, who nearly five months ago demanded a "purge" of the Republican National Committee, today charged Republican Chairman John D. M. Hamilton with using "bad psychology" in committing the party to a policy of cutting off relief spending.

Speaking before Dartmouth College students, the Republican governor said it was "poor business to give the impression that the Republican Party would cut off relief spending."

Last December, Governor Aiken, in an open letter to the national committee, demanded that the "baneful influence of the southern committeemen" be wiped out. He called for a broad affirmative program for the party.

Voters Alienated, He Says.

"Most of the men and women working on WPA or PWA and other public agency jobs," he said, "are not parasites. . . . They would rather have jobs in private industry with the hope of advancement always before them. But they are not going to vote the ticket of any party whose head comes out against public money for their relief . . . We must not permit their families to want.

Hungry for Leadership.

"The people are hungry for leadership," he asserted, "but those who are turning away from the Administration are not turning to the Republican Party."

He scored "railing at and hating" the President, and said "the unfinished task before us is to provide a standard around which . . . every loyal American can rally. We cannot do this merely because our opponents are in default; we can never present an alternative to the New Deal until we gain the confidence and support of the people by showing that we are able, and not just willing, to assume control of the Federal Government.

Merchant to Fight D.C. Privilege Tax In Higher Courts

A higher court test of the District's busines privilege tax was seen last night, when Neild & Sauerhoff, produce wholesalers, of 1303 Water street southwest, announced they would ask reversal of a Municipal Court judgment by Judge Ellen K. Ready.

The firm paid under protest $245.92 as a busines privilege tax, and sued to compel its restoration.

Next step in the attack on the law is an appeal to the United States Court of Appeals. Numerous attacks on the tax were filed on the theory the District should be enjoined from attempting to enforce collection. However, District Court justices held the tax must be paid before merchants could complain.

South Methodists Adopt '39 Budget

Nashville, Tenn., April 22 (AP).—Closing its ninety-second annual meeting, the board of missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church South adopted today a budget of $1,618,596 for 1939.

The board also memorialized the general conference at Birmingham, April 28 to authorize a special church-wide appeal for a free will offering to rehabilitate Methodist properties in war-torn China. The "China Relief Fund," recently raised by the church, amounted to $60,000.

Roosevelt Won To Borah Trust Licensing Plan

Monopoly

lowing his message of last week calling for a Government lending and spending program involving outlays of $4,500,000,000, will complete all the recommendations now expected of him, affecting business.

The President's statement that he and Borah were in substantial agreement on everything connected with the antitrust laws sent newsmen to the record for a review of Borah's views on that subject.

It is his contention that monopoly and monopolistic price-fixing cause most of the Nation's economic troubles. He holds, too, that a constantly increasing proportion of the national wealth has been coming under the control of a diminishing number of corporations. Among other things, he argues that such a concentration of wealth in corporate hands impairs the powers of labor to bargain with the corporations.

Urged Platform Plank.

Long a crusader for strict enforcement of adequate antitrust laws, Borah fought a conspicuous battle for the inclusion of an acceptable plank on monopoly in the Republican platform of 1936. For this purpose alone, he has said, he entered the convention as a candidate.

A corporate licensing act was introduced more than a year ago by Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), Wyoming. When, just before the convening of the present session of Congress, Administration officials delivered a series of addresses on monopoly, Borah and O'Mahoney got their heads together and worked out a revised version of the bill.

The revised measure would prohibit the issuance of a license to any corporation which is a trust, or combination in violation of the anti-trust laws, or which is a party to any contract, or combination, or conspiracy in restraint of free competition. Without a license a corporation could not do interstate business, either directly or indirectly.

Borah has said many times that he thought the present anti-trust laws, if rigidly enforced, were sufficient to meet the situation.

The licensing bill would supplement them and provide enforcement mechanism in addition to that of prosecution through the Department of Justice.

One Strike Settled, 14 On in Michigan

Detroit, April 22 (U.P.).—A strike was called and settled in one factory within a few hours tonight, but negotiators seemed far from agreement in other controversies that have paralyzed production in 14 Michigan plants for several days. President H. R. Fox of the Fox Machine Co., at Jackson, announced settlement of a strike in his plant with agreement on seniority issues and 75 men returned to work immediately.

Conferees made an attempt to end a strike that has closed all eight plants of the Bohn Aluminum Corporation, but no settlement was reached.

Conant Urges Limning News Against History

Harvard Head Says Press Is Responsible for Educating Adults.

Dr. James B. Conant, president of Harvard University, yesterday told the American Society of Newspaper Editors that the press in this country carries a "heavy burden of responsibility" as an educator of adults. For that reason he recommended that spot news be considered against the background of history.

"I have suggested," he said, "that our overconcern with the contemporary, our disregard for the past are unfortunate. If there be anything in this opinion of mine, the implications in regard to journalism are obvious.

Would Employ Stimulus.

"Not that I am suggesting that in place of the dispatch from Paris you substitute a section from Carlyle's French Revolution or that your Washington correspondent write an historical essay on Jackson or Jefferson; but if it is desirable to stimulate people to soak themselves in the history, biography and literature of our past, there can be no more effective way of applying this stimulus than through the medium you gentlemen control.

"A contemporary event may be treated as one more startling shift in a kaleidoscopic pattern—without antecedents and without implications. The reader may be alarmed, amused, pleased, angered, or moved to sympathy; but not moved to think. Or the same item of news may stir in certain individuals not only emotional but rational processes.

"Learned Press" Is Need.

"The reader, the occasional reader, I must admit, will be aroused to ponder, to ask questitotns, to attempt to place the event in a series of events, to compare and contrast the present with the past. In short, a contemporary incident has served as a starting point for a bit of adult education, and consciously or unconsciously the writer of the news has played a Socratic role as a skillful teacher.

"I take it that we would all agree that within certain limits the reporting of the daily news and the writing of comments upon it, determines the reaction of the readers. If this be so, and always admitting the practical limits of a real world composed of real people, then like the Puritan clergy of another age those who handle the daily news carry a heavy burden of responsibility as adult educators. If it be worth while to strive continually for a more rational, wiser group of men and women in any community, it is surely essential that the teachers themselves be capable of stimulating thought and developing judgment. The case for a "learned press" need be argued no further.

Fear Greatest Handicap.

"To be ignorant of what occurred before you were born is to be always a child. This ancient saying sums up the situation. Seen through the eyes of a child the world is at times more delightful than otherwise, but at times infinitely more alarming. If we are to have an adult population acting as adults as far as possible (and, it is not very far, I grant you) then the less we provide them with childish vision the better.

"It was a statesman who was also a philosopher who wrote, 'No passion so effectually robs the mind of all its powers of acting and reasoning as fear . . . To make anything very terrible, obscurity seems in general to be necessary. When we know the full extent of any danger, when we can accustom our eyes to it, a great deal of the apprehension vanishes.'

"It is the obscurity of the future from which the apparitions rise that make us recoil with fright. And robbed of the powers of acting and reasoning we proceed to rail instead of debate and to rush in a panic from the vendor of one nostrum to another."

Editors

opment in candid photography and the transmission of pictures have made the public increasingly sensitive to an invasion of privacy and to an omnipresence sometimes interpreted as a nuisance, of which there was far less consciousness 15 years ago.

"In view of these developments with which we have been confronted, the American Society of Newspaper Editors feels that a reaffirmation of ideals and a statement of those intents and practices which it considers vital, which it considers in good taste, and above all which it considers in the public interest, ought to be made at this time.

"Unfortunately all citizens do not think through the meaning of a free press. Too many regard it as merely the profitable privilege of publishers, instead of the right of all the people and the chief institution of representative government.

"A free press is that privilege of citizenship which makes governmental dictatorship impossible. When editors fight for the liberty to speak and to write, they fight for the greatest of all human rights under government.

"He is not thoughtful who cannot see that democracy cannot exist except through the maintenance of a channel through which information can flow freely from the center of government to all the people, and through which praise and criticism can flow freely from the people to the center.

"In view of what we believe to be this growing lack of appreciation on the part of the public of the true value and true functions of a free press, we hold that the members of this society should carry on a constant campaign for the purpose of making the average citizen more acutely aware that a free press is not principally the editor's privilege for himself alone, but his right and mandate to be of the utmost service to his fellow citizens in a republic.

"While we abhor every sort of governmental censorship that exists elsewhere and every suggestion of it that has been made or could be made in the United States, we take upon ourselves the responsibility for a censorship of good taste which will lead us away from such invasion of privacy as is not absolutely warranted by the public welfare.

"We take upon ourselves a censorship that will lead to the elimination of propaganda.

"We take upon ourselves a censorship that will lead to greater accuracy in the reporting and presentation of news.

"It has been well said that 'the press must stand guard over itself that it may be worthy to stand guard for the public.'

"We call upon all editors, then, to recognize a growing criticism, to face it fairly, to set their houses in order, to be governed by good taste, by a sense of justice, by complete devotion to the public interest, and to toil unceasingly to educate our readers to such a sense of the value of a free press in America that the citizens of this republic shall become the willing co-operators, the fellow warriors with us, in a never-ceasing fight for the maintenance of democratic institutions."

Adoption of the restatement followed a clinical session at the National Press Club, at which Carl W. Ackerman, dean of the graduate school of journalism, Columbia University; William Allen White, of the Emporia Gazette; David Lawrence, of the United States News, and others took part in an off-the-record discussion on "Responsibilities of the Press."

Last night the editors and their wives were the guests of Eugene Meyer, publisher of The Washington Post, and Mrs. Meyer at a buffet supper.

Residents Voice Varied Views On D. C. Ballot

Trend Indicates Majority Want Representation in Congress.

With the date for the District's vote on suffrage only eight days distant, Washingtonians expressed widely varied opinions on the forthcoming election and its outcome yesterday.

Dr. Canfield.

But the trend among property owners and Government workers indicated a majority of them wished representation in Congress, and a right to express themselves by the ballot, as the other citizens of the United States do, and as they did themselves before they came to the voteless District of Columbia.

In some instances there was definite opposition to enfranchisement of the Capital's residents.

"As a property owner for the past 10 years, and as a resident here for even longer than that, I feel I should be represented," asserted Dr. R. H. Canfield, Navy Department physicist.

"I pay taxes and am an American citizen in the service of the Government. I certainly should have the right to vote. Taxation without representation smacks of Fascism. I am going to vote for the right to vote April 30."

"Personally I don't care whether I vote or not," said a stenographer at the Bureau of Internal Revenue. "It would take a lot of time and study of the ballot. And there are movies to see, and lots of other things to do—like shopping."

"I'm going right to the polls and see how it feels to vote again," said Mrs. Robert Howe, former Virginia debutante, who lives at 4824 Reservoir road.

Mrs. Howe.

"For one thing, I don't want my small son to grow up in a place where he will not have the same rights as citizens throughout the country, and especially in the State of his ancestors.

"Down in Virginia we have always fought for State's rights above everything else. We lost the slaves in the Civil War. And now there's a form of slavery in Washington because we don't have a voice in any governmental affairs. Maybe, if we can't get the vote here, we ought to secede from the Union and have another Civil War."

"Boss, I wants that ballot, and believe me I'm going to go to the polls, boss, and vote," opined a lanky red-cap at the Union Station.

"It's a shame we haven't got the rights the rest of the country has," flared Mrs. B. Frank, of 4007 Connecticut avenue, a housewife.

Mrs. Frank.

"I'm following what I read in the papers, and I'm going to vote a week from Saturday, you can bet."

"If they vote in the District, they'll probably close the bars on voting days, and I'll lose business," contemplated a bartender not far from Washington Circle. "Still, maybe they'll vote for Sunday liquor sales, too. I don't think I'll vote, but I don't care much who wins."

"Did you ever hear of the Boston Tea Party?" asked A. L. Livsie, of the 700 block of Van Buren street, a taxi driver. "And don't forget what Patrick Henry said about liberty or death.

Livsie.

"I'm going to vote, sure; but what good will it do me, anyhow? I guess I'm just indifferent, when I can work on a cross-word puzzle between fares."

"A few election extras now and then would sell a lot of papers," said a newsboy on Dupont circle. "I'm too young to vote for the right to vote. But it sure would help business."

Cottmyer.

"I don't think much of the idea of a vote for the District," stated Jack Cottmyer, filling station operator and a District resident for the past nine years.

"We might have just the added burden of municipal politics. Just now we are well governed. We haven't any steam-roller or machine politics in the city, as so many cities have.

"I vote an absentee ballot myself. I'm afraid people might be easily swayed and political factions not to the best interests of the District would result.

American Revolutionary War, with ballots being used instead of bullets."

William H. Mondell, vice chairman of the conference, announced that six District judges would serve as a board of election overseers next Saturday, while an election judge and registration officer, assisted by clerks, would be present at each of the 63 precinct polling places.

All Residents May Vote.

Any bona fide resident of the District, over 21 years of age, he explained, may register his name and address and will then be handed the ballot, calling for a "yes" or "no" answer to two questions:

"Do you want the right to vote for officials of your own city government in the District of Columbia?"

"Do you want the right to vote for President of the United States and for members of Congress from the District of Columbia?"

Polling places, which will be open from 1 p. m. to 9 p. m., are all in schools. Precinct divisions are indicated on 150,000 maps being circulated by the election committee of the conference.

Smith Makes Appeal.

Mondell's appeal for a decisive popular verdict at the polls was echoed by Arthur Clarendon Smith, vice chairman of the conference, who declared, "We must have at least 100,000 votes on April 30."

Only serious hitch in the conference proceedings came when E. W. Smallman, representing the Petworth P.-T. A., took exception to a clause in the suffrage resolution describing Washington citizens as "unsurpassed in the Republic in intelligence, public spirit, patriotic devotion, and every other distinctive American characteristic."

When several citizens objected to this "negative" statement, George E. Dieffenbach, of the Chevy Chase Citizens Association, offered a compromise motion characterizing District citizens as "equal" to other Americans in the various civic virtues. The motion was carried.

3-Eyed Reptile Fossil Unearthed in Oklahoma

Norman, Okla., April 22 (AP).—Discovery near here of a 12-foot fossilized permian reptile with a third "eye" in the middle of its head was reported today by J. Willis Stovall, paleontologist at the University of Oklahoma.

Stovall said the third eye, atop the head behind the other two "probably was functional," and the reptile was the largest permian vertebrate ever found in America.

Pershing Stands at Attention As Bishop Freeman Weds Son

Crowd of 1,000 Cheers General When He Enters New York Church; Warrior Is Pale, but Walks With Firm Step.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 22.—Gen. John J. Pershing stood rigidly erect for more than ten minutes in St. Thomas' Church today and watched his son, Warren, marry Muriel Bache Richards, granddaughter of Jules S. Bache, financier and art patron.

The weather, which had been wretched throughout the morning, took a favorable turn after noon and by the time the general, who has been seriously ill, arrived at the church at Fifth avenue and Fifty-third street, the sun was breaking through the clouds. A crowd of more than a thousand was on hand.

Women, children, men, all stood unmoving as the general, in cutaway and silk hat, arrived in a town car. As the general stepped out, the crowd burst into a spontaneous cheer. No one pressed forward, no one crowded to shake his hand.

Apparently moved by the tribute, Pershing doffed his hat and smiled. He was pale, but his step was firm as he entered the side door of the church.

Wife Loses Work, Jobless Man Kills Sweetheart, 2 Men

Cleveland, April 22 (AP).—William Peters, 43, colored and unemployed, went berserk today. In 20 minutes he shot to death a colored maid, two white employes of an exclusive apartment house, and was captured by police after an 80-mile-an-hour automobile chase.

The victims: Lily Mae Traylor, colored, 24; Hans Getslaff, 33, and Mitchell Paser, 40.

Police said Peters apparently shot the two men because of resentment of his wife's loss of a job at the apartment building where they worked. The maid, they said, was his "sweetheart."

"All three of them were mean to me," police quoted Peters, whose recent application for a WPA job was rejected.

Mrs. D. C. Leggett Gets Reno Divorce

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Reno, Nev., April 22.—Mrs. Dagmar Carlson Leggett won an uncontested divorce decree here today from Eugene S. Leggett, of Washington. Leggett is director of the National Emergency Council.

The couple was married at Detroit on February 23, 1924. Property rights and custody of a 13-year-old son, Eugene, jr., were settled by agreement.

Leggett a former president of the National Press Club, came to Washington about 15 years ago as correspondent for the Detroit Free Press. He became acting director of the National Emergency Council after the resignation of Frank Walker.

Levine's $30,000 Lures 6th to Jail For Extort Trial

The Department of Justice late yesterday announced the arrest of Charles Edmund Lavendar, 36, in Chicago, on charges of attempting, by letter, to extort $30,000 from Murray Levine, father of 12-year-old Peter Levine, missing from his home in New Rochelle, N. Y., since February 24.

G-men were certain the prisoner had no connection with the actual abduction. A former resident of Berkeley, Calif., Lavendar said he once was in the Marine Corps. He is the sixth man arrested for attempting to extort money from Levine.

Republic Asks For Injunction In Labor Fight

Wants Board Restrained From Enforcing Order to Reinstate 5,000.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, April 22.—The Republic Steel Corporation asked the United States Circuit Court of Appeals today to halt the National Labor Relations Board from enforcing its order that the company recognize the C. I. O. and reinstate 5,000 dismissed employes pending outcome of an appeal filed by the company Monday.

The court set next Friday for a hearing.

Joseph W. Henderson, Philadelphia attorney for the corporation, said enforcement of the N. L. R. B. order would cause "irreparable damage" to the Republic Corporation.

The hearing Friday will be entirely on the question of a restraining order and will not cover any of the company's arguments in appealing the board's ruling.

Henderson said the order meant reinstatement of the 5,000 men with back pay averaging $6.50 a day from last May.

The corporation contends that the labor troubles which resulted in riots and the deaths of there men at its Ohio plants were caused by the C. I. O. after the company refused to sign a contract with it.

S. W. O. C. Loses Election.

Butler, Pa., April 22 (AP).—Employes of the American Rolling Mill Co. rejected the Steel Workers Organizing Committee as their collective bargaining agency today by 1,243 to 402.

The National Labor Relations Board supervised the election, which was a straight yes or no vote regarding the C. I. O. organization.

The company is the seventh largest steel producer and has never had a contract with the union.

New York, April 22 (AP).—Signing of an agreement between the Inland Boatmen's Union (C. I. O.) and the Federal Barge Lines, a War Department enterprise on the Mississippi, was hailed by C. I. O. leaders today as the signal for an organization campaign along the Mississippi and Ohio. The agreement covers hours and working conditions for 800 terminal workers in four lower Mississippi cities: New Orleans, Vicksburg, Baton Rouge, and Helena, Ark.

4 Strip and Beat Man, Then Paint Swastikas on Him

New York, April 22 (U.P.).—Four men stripped a man who was alone in an office, beat him and then painted Swastikas on his body, according to a police report tonight.

The office, on the second floor of a building opposite the Long Island Railroad Station in one of the busiest sections of Brooklyn, was wrecked, police said.

Boy Carves Dynamite; 2 Fingers Blown Off

Thomas C. Scalley, 12, of 4111 Fessenden street northwest, was in serious condition at Georgetown Hospital yesterday as the result of an explosion which tore two fingers from one of his hands when he attempted to carve a whistle from a dynamite cap at his home.

The boy found the cap while he was on a picnic at Germantown, Md., and brought it home. The blast filled his face with powder, and doctors said he escaped being blinded only by a miracle. They were attempting yesterday to save the rest of the maimed hand, and last night said they thought the chances were good.

Boy, 16, Reveals How He Killed Lame Mother

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, April 22.—Sixteen-year-old Teddy Danielsen today told how he slew his crippled mother with a bread knife, but he confessed with trembling lips that he did not know why he drove the 9-inch blade into her throat, and said he loved her.

Pale and nervous, he related his story from the witness stand in a court room teeming with spectators.

He recalled how he found his mother making a pie in their kitchen last March 3 and how he informed her he had played hookey from high school.

"She grabbed me by the face and shoulders and shook me," he said in a recital interrupted by tears. "She scratched my face."

"Did she hit you?" asked Leonard Reid, defense attorney.

"I was too excited to notice."

"Do you remember what happened then?"

The slender lad, pictured by character witnesses as an "average boy," hesitated. Then he spoke:

"I think I must have struck her with the knife."

The defendant's father, Theodore, sr., peered anxiously at his only child.

Chief Justice Cornelius Harrington, of the criminal court, who alone must decide the boy's fate since the defense waived a jury, will hear closing arguments tomorrow.

Folk Festival To Offer Songs Of Lumberjack

100 Michigan Workers in Vanishing Industry Will Perform May 6-8.

Early days of the old Northwest will be brought to Constitution Hall May 6, 7, and 8 in the songs and dances of Michigan lumberjacks who will appear on the program of the fifth annual National Folk Festival.

The lumberjack group will be sponsored by the Michigan Tourist and Resort Association and presented with H. S. Babcock of Alma, Michigan, as manager, and E. C. Beck of Central State Teachers College at Mt. Pleasant as adviser.

The participants were selected in competitions supervised by Constance Rourke and committee. More than 100 member of the vanishing industry competed.

While the Wisconsin lumberjacks, who will also appear on the program, show a strong Norwegian influence and will be presented with their unusual musical instruments as a feature, the Michigan group has a stronger Anglo-Saxon flavor. They will sing and dance just as the lumberjacks did in the bunkhouses where they spent the long winter.

The Michigan State Conservation Commission has recently made provisions to restore a number of abandoned lumber camps, in order that tourists may have a real idea of how the lumberjacks lived. The camps and bunkhouses will be so arranged that tourists can use them for overnight lodging. It is estimated that the camps were located in at least 385 different sites over the State.

Blast Entombs 75 Workmen in Virginia Mine

Blast

States forced their way through a crowd of more than 7,000 which jammed the narrow mountain road from Grundy to the mine before they could attack the huge piles of debris. They said it was doubtful if they could make progress into the tunnels before tomorrow.

One miner—Mike Lilly—owes his life to a mishap. He went to the lamp house for his head lamp before going to work and was left behind by the car which was to have taken him into the tunnel.

The trapped men were believed to have been on the cars when the blast struck. They had left the entry about 10 minutes before the explosion.

State Police Sergt. P. L. Sprenger, of Roanoke, who was on the highway near the mine, rushed to the scene and found miners already attacking mountains of rock and rubble.

First Rescuers Arrive.

A West Virginia State Bureau of Mines rescue crew from Dante, Va., was the first organized rescue party to reach the shattered mine. This crew at once began tearing into the shambles.

Other crews arriving later raised the number of trained men digging into the mountain to 24. These were assisted by miners.

L. E. Woods, of Huntington, W. Va., president of the Red Jacket Coal Co., was in Washington when he received news of the explosion. He hurried to Grundy at once.

Opened This Year.

Virginia State police headquarters was notified at once, and Maj. H. B. Nicholas ordered ten troopers to the scene.

The United States Bureau of Mines office at Pittsburgh ordered a rescue truck to the scene from Norton, Va., with a crew of ten trained rescue workers. A Bureau of Mines rescue car at Jenkinjones, W. Va., also was ordered to the scene behind a special engine.

In addition to the rescue crew from Dante, the West Virginia mine bureau sent another and held more in readiness. Other crews went from Gary, W. Va., and Pocahontas, Va. The Norfolk & Western Railroad sent a rescue car.

J. E. Parker, of Columbus, Ohio, vice president of the coal company, had left Grundy for Columbus shortly before the explosion. Towns along his route were asked to watch for him and turn him back.

E. F. Smith, of Red Jacket, W. Va., general superintendent of Red Jacket operations, rushed to Grundy to aid E. R. Kirby, mine superintendent.

Rock Dust Blamed.

The explosion was believed to have been caused by igniting rock dust which, it was explained, usually is set off by flaring natural gas that collects in pockets and may be fired by a chance spark or by flames from miners' lamps. Bureau of Mines officials said a few ounces of dust to a lineal foot of mine shaft are sufficient to cause such a blast as today's.

Tunnels in the mine here, which enter the mountain about 300 yards from its base, extend into the heart of the mountain about half a mile. These tunnels are connected by a network of cross burrowings, forming catacombs.

Frantic relatives of men missing at a hasty checkup crowded as near the base of the tunnel mouth as authorities would permit. Crowds were held in check by ropes stretched at a distance from the mine.

Employs 300 Men.

The Keen Mountin mine, opened last fall, employed approximately 300 men in two shifts. Normally one of the largest operations in this area, its capacity is 400 tons daily, with its tipple so arranged that 14 railway cars can be loaded at once.

It has 21 driftmouths, two of which are used as mine entries, the others serving as ventilating shafts and otherwise as mechanical adjuncts. The two principal driftmouths were closed by the blast.

Headquarters of the company are in Columbus. Successor to the W. M. Ritter Lumber Co., it operates mines in Virginia, West Virginia, Ohio and Kentucky.

12th Precinct Cops Open Pistol Range

Police at the Twelfth Precinct today will play host to half a dozen pistol teams at the formal opening of the precinct's new pistol range near Terra Cotta, D. C.

Among the police officials expected for the opening, set for 1:30 p. m., are Maj. Ernest Brown, superintendent, and Inspectors L. I. H. Edwards and Edward Kelly.

Representing No. 12 will be five of seven men selected in competition Thursday: Privates R. L. Decker, C. H. Miller, O. J. See, W. B. Yates, L. L. Blair, P. Caicar and J. G. Beach.

Headquarters detective force will be represented by five men who won second place in police pistol competition last year. The team includes Detective Sergeants H. D. Secrest, H. E. Brodie and Privates J. B. Layton, William Thomason and H. L. Pilling.

Other teams are expected from the First, Sixth and Eighth precincts, the Secret Service, Lorton Guards and the Coast Guard, according to police at the Twelfth Precinct.

Justice Owen Roberts' Daughter Engaged to Charles Hamilton

ELIZABETH R. ROBERTS.

United States Supreme Court Justice Owen J. Roberts and Mrs. Roberts last night announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Elizabeth R. Roberts, to Charles Hamilton, of Greens Farms, Conn., son of the late Burgoyne Hamilton, of New York City and Greens Farms, and Mrs. Florence Wildes Hamilton, of New York City.

The wedding will take place in June in Kimberton, Pa., where Justice and Mrs. Roberts maintain a home.

Miss Roberts attended the Irwin School and the Curtis Institute of Music, in Philadelphia, and the Phillips Gallery of Art School here. She is both a musician and artist.

A graduate of Taft School and Trinity College, in Hartford, where he was a member of the exclusive St. Anthony Club, Hamilton now is connected with the Bridgeport Brass Co., of Bridgeport, Conn.

After their wedding and honeymoon, the couple will live in Bridgeport.

4 Republicans Holding Fate of Wage-Hour Bill

Wage

Republican votes to pass it—only a dozen or so would be required—and by so doing, aim at two political objectives, to split the Southern Democrats directly away from the Administration, and (they hope) make many businessmen angry at the New Deal's effort to control wages and hours.

Several considerations and two men's views must be considered here, it was said yesterday. It was understood that Representative Taylor, of Tennessee, a bitter anti-Administration Republican, is finding it difficult to vote for the bill no matter what the strategy of his party superiors. The other man is Representative Lewis, of Colorado, an in-and-out Democrat, who might combine with the three remaining Republicans and the four certain Administration votes to make the necessary majority.

Crucial Hearing Set.

A crucial hearing on the bill will be held by the Rules Committee next week, probably on Tuesday. Mrs. Norton, Labor Committee chairman, will appear on the bill, and possibly Representative Robert Ramspeck (Democrat), of Georgia, ranking committee Democrat, who held the bill unconstitutional in a separate report appended to the majority report.

From a Southern point of view the present bill is much more drastic than the bill they recommitted last December 17. Since it sets rigid standards, without possibility of favorable differentials such as the Southerners feel their low-wage, long-hour industries deserve, they are almost unanimous in opposition. Some of them discussed filibuster possibilities yesterday, although filibusters are difficult, almost impossible, under the House's strict rules.

Depression Stressed.

The committee's report yesterday stressed the present depression's downward course as an argument for the bill, saying the constant recession "may threaten the foundations of Government itself."

They added: "The need for its enactment during the present session of Congress is urgent. In the last few months there has occurred an alarmingly sharp decline in business activity. With that decline have come the inevitable wage cuts which the great mass of American businessmen so deplore but are powerless to prevent."

The Government, said the report, "cannot in silence see the channels of commerce used to spread suffering and destitution."

The report argued that relief demands, increased by payment of oppressively low wages, made the relief burden of the Government as "in effect a subsidy for such employers—a subsidy made necessary by the inability of the great majority of such employers to maintain fair labor standards in the face of wage cuts by chiseling competitors."

The bill abolishes child labor, setting 16 years of age as the minimum; vests authority for administration of the law in the Secretary of Labor; and defines the extension of the act's operations as applying to Nation-wide industries; those dependent for existence on substantial purchases or sales of goods in commerce and on transportation in commerce; or those industries whose relation to commerce is close and substantial.

from which they fled and to acclaim the men who advocate the paternalistic and autocratic policies and practices of which they were the victims, but which they have forgotten in the free air of America.

"Ill-considered reforms through the centralization and expansion of political authority may not bring out a violent revolution here, but they are attended by grave dangers—dangers no less real because intangible. They furnish the spectacle of freedom forging its own chains. Liberty and freedom of action are being whittled away by subtle and seductive promises of benefits to come."

Dr. Jesse R. Kellems, Los Angeles minister, who addressed the congress on the same program with Mr. Thorpe, declared our forefathers had made a sad mistake when they rested their faith on the theory of the melting pot.

Indians On Program.

"Not only has it failed to mix the races and bring them out molded in the American pattern, but many Americans of the old stock have partaken of the alien-mindedness of the un-Americanized within our borders," he said.

Speaking without notes, as did the President, William D. Saltiel declared the Constitution "gives only the people of the United States the right to make changes" in the Government. Frequently interrupted by applause, he was given a rising vote of approval at the close of his talk—a demonstration not accorded Mr. Roosevelt.

The Chicago lawyer urged the Daughters "not to make the Constitution a sacrosanct document which we merely revere but to study it and make it part of our lives." Then, he went on, "when we go to the polls we can vote for those officials who by their records show that they respect our greatest national heritage."

Without referring specifically to Administration spending, he warned that "when taxes become too heavy, men lose their heads and seek to overthrow, and when they overthrow they destroy not only the bad but all the good that has been handed down to them."

He pointed to the 13,000,000 unemployed and to the children leaving schools with no assurance of employment ahead. In times such as these, he declared, it would be easy for a demagogue to gain control and to transform the citizens into a mob.

"Democracy is a slower method than dictatorship, but it's safer," he added, amid renewed applause.

Mrs. Becker Honored.

Mrs. Frank M. Dick, of Maryland, moved that Mrs. William A. Becker, retiring D. A. R. president general, be given the title of honorary president general. The motion was approved unanimously.

Mrs. Becker introduced Miss Janet Richards, of Washington, one of 60 living charter members of the D. A. R. and the only member present who has attended every congress since the founding of the organization. On behalf of Mrs. Samuel A. Kimberley, of the District, Miss Richards presented a Colonial fork and ladle used by a Revolutionary soldier, to be placed in the D. A. R. museum here.

numerous officials who have resigned because of lack of sympathy with some of the Administration policies.

Dean Acheson resigned as Undersecretary of the Treasury November 15, 1933, in protest against policies he felt were undermining Government bonds he was offering the public.

Less than a week later, Prof. O. M. W. Sprague quit as the department's economic adviser.

Next, Lewis W. Douglas gave up his position as director of the budget on August 31, 1934, and on January 17, 1936, Thomas Jefferson Coolidge quit as assistant secretary.

Last September Morrison Shafroth, chief counsel for the Bureau of Internal Revenue, and his assistant, Russell J. Ryan, according to a statement issued by them, were forced to quit because they would not agree to take part in presentation of names selected by officials to press the Administration's charges of tax evasion and avoidance. They held it was not "proper" to use the Bureau of Internal Revenue in the manner contemplated.

Treasury officials last night had no comment on the resignation of Dr. Viner, other than to say he had quit "verbally" last week.

Dr. Viner broke into the New Deal Administration publicity as a "mystery man" in charge of the secretly - conducted $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund in 1934. He had been at the Treasury less than a month when he first came into public notice in connection with the fund.

A native of Canada, he became a citizen of the United States in 1914. He is 46 and has written a number of monographs on financial affairs.

It was pointed out shortly after he took the Treasury position that a year previous he had declared in an address at the University of Georgia that "I see no reason for bothering with silver at all." He added:

"Another measure proposed is the Government buy silver. That that silver be remonetized and that is equivalent to devaluation plus a bonus to silver producers. I see no reason why the inflationary measures adopted by the Government should be such as to render special profits to a special group who have not, as far as I can see, any special claims to special consideration."

In December of that year, when it was announced that he would resign soon to return to the University of Chicago, it was reported he had been the guiding hand behind the Government's huge silver-purchasing program as well as the operations of the stabilization fund.

Tax Deadlock Broken; Profits Levy Narrowed

Tax

Impost on Assets.

Gains on assets sold after 2 years would be taxed at a 15 per cent flat rate. Assets held between 18 months and 2 years before they were turned over at a profit would be taxed at a 20 per cent flat rate. Short-term gains on property held less than 18 months would be considered speculative and subject to taxation under the regular and surtax income tax rates.

This was almost identical with the Senate capital gains tax provision, with the exception of the 20 per cent rate on assets held from 18 months to 2 years.

Two "cushions" were inserted in the bill to ease the tax load on deficit and debt-ridden corporations. Companies that use earnings to make up deficits would be exempt from the profits tax. Earnings irrevocably set aside for retirement of debt, would be treated as income distributed, for tax purposes.

An Even Break.

Although a fractional profits tax was salvaged, the agreement appeared a nearly even break for both Houses and the Administration itself. The compromise was confined to these two controversial sections of the bill. Other taxes in disagreement were allowed to go over for settlement next week.

Just how much the compromise will yield in revenue waited on Treasury estimates to be submitted today. Harrison predicted yields would not fall far short of Senate corporation tax estimates, which were $89,000,000 in exces of the House bill.

No enthusiastic jubilation was shown by any of the conferees after the meeting broke up. Chairman Robert L. Doughton, of the House conferees, said he was "pleased" with the settlement. Representative Fred Vinson (Democrat), of Kentucky, grinned his assent. Vinson has been appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate to the Court of Appeals for the District, but has refused to take his seat until the tax controversy was settled.

Should Aid Business.

Senator Harrison told reporters he would have preferred the Senate's flat 18 per cent tax on corporate income to the 16½ to 19 per cent undivided profits tax. But he said the latter is a vast improvement over present law and the original House bill, and should lend encouragement to business. He said the capital gains tax compromise "should give great impetus to business."

A sharp fight against the undivided profits tax concession was put up by Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, but he was outvoted. Twice he left the conference after vote reverses. Once he retired to the restaurant to eat while his colleagues fasted.

One Senate conferee, Senator William H. King (Democrat), of Utah, said the compromise had left only a "shadow" of the undivided profits tax, "and after two years even the shadow will be dead."

An approaching agreement was apparent to reporters as the conference dragged on long past the lunch hour without a break. Once House and Senate managers separated for a half hour, the House group gathering in the adjoining Sergeant-at-Arms office to debate a disputed point.

Impasse Thwarted.

Senators David I. Walsh, of Massachusetts, and Walter F. George, of Georgia, Senate Democratic conferees, in a joint statement said the compromise "was reached because of a determination to prevent a complete impasse which would have prevented the substitution of the many improvements and benefits contained in either the House or the Senate bill, over the present objectionable law."

"The conferees were unanimous," said Walsh and George, "in their belief that it would be unfortunate if no tax legislation of a remedial character were enacted during the present session of Congress."

The two Senators said the 16½ to 19 per cent undivided profits tax spread is "very much more advantageous" than provisions of the House bill and predicted the capital gains tax compromise "will undoubtedly be applauded by the business interests of the country."

"Though the compromise does not meet our views in all particulars," they said, "yet the limitation of time prevents the principle from becoming permanent and requires the next Congress to treat this issue independently of any other tax principle or issue and to declare a definite policy." Walsh and George called the capital gains tax agreement "a complete triumph for the principles maintained by the Senate."

Limitation of the profits tax principle operation to two years they said "will permit the country to pass upon this question in the next election of members of Congress."

Tax Relief Provided.

In treatment of corporations earning less than $25,000 annually, the conferees retained provisions of the House bill and "notch" provisions of the House measure providing intermediate relief for companies on the $25,000 borderline.

Companies in the less than $25,000 group would be completely exempt from the profits tax principle. They would be taxed a flat 12½ per cent on the first $5,000 of earnings, 14 per cent on the next $15,000, and 16 per cent on the next $5,000.

House conferees (and some Senate conferees agreed with them) believed these provisions were more favorable to the run of small business concerns than the Senate bill, which would have allowed companies making less than $25,000 a tax deduction equal to 10 per cent of the difference between their actual income and $25,000.

Under the Senate bill, companies earning less than $2,272 would have been completely freed from taxes, while small concerns earning over $6,000 would have paid a greater tax than under the House bill.

The new 16½ to 19 per cent undivided profits tax on companies earning over $25,000 has a stepdown feature that reduces the rate of tax by one-fourth of 1 per cent for every 10 per cent of dividends distributed.

Thus the compromise undivided profits tax principle as it affects large corporations will operate with a 16½ per cent minimum tax and a 19 per cent maximum levy, depending on the amount of profits a corporation withholds from its shareholders.

A quick-witted jeweler saved diamonds valued at $5,000 last night after a bandit had entered his store at 1104 Fourteenth street northwest and robbed him of $140 in cash while hundreds passed outside.

The jeweler, Jacob Slavin, was preparing to close his shop when a 25-year-old colored man entered, displayed a gun and asked for the money in the safe. Slavin handed it over and was told by the bandit to reach into the front window and "hand over the diamonds."

Slavin reached over the window and, as he did so, lunged forward to fall inside, at the same time screaming for help. The bandit, frightened, ran from the store and disappeared in the crowd. The jeweler said the man had been in the store only Thursday to sell a watch, later found to have been stolen.

Traders Match Skill.

Two wily "hoss traders" faced each other across the conference table in yesterday's settlement—Senator Harrison, who has an unsurpassed reputation for legislative bargaining, and Representative Doughton, whose dogged determination has won many a battle for the House.

Both had asserted they would never yield on their opposite views of the profits tax. But a swap involving conference acceptance of the House profits tax principle coupled with Senate capital gains tax provisions had long been rumored.

A compromise along these lines might have been reached before yesterday had not the President a week ago written a letter indorsing House provisions on both levies and asserting Senate proposals struck at the fundamental principles of American taxation. The letter was resented by Senate conferees who stubbornly declined to discuss anything short of profits tax repeal, voted by the Senate. Harrison's position apparently was strengthened Wednesday when the Senate committee investigating unemployment and relief recommended complete repeal of the levy and sharp modification of the capital gains tax.

Yesterday's surprise settlement came in the face of Harrison's assertion on Thursday that today's conference would be brief and the profits tax would be the "last thing" the Senate would yield on. At both Senate and House hearings, business witnesses put up a united front against the profits tax principle. Several business representatives said they would willingly pay a higher tax involved in the Senate's flat 18 per cent rate than submit to a tax based on dividend distribution.

Democratic nomination for Governor.

Informed of Kelly's request for an F. B. I. investigation, Guffey snapped, "Let him have them do it. Evidently, from the way Mr. Kelly is squealing, he must have some splinters between his toes."

The Senator said the present WPA organization was set up by Edward N. Jones and David L. Lawrence, Democratic State chairman. Jones, a Guffey lieutenant, resigned. The present State administrator is J. Banks Hudson.

"I never knew J. Banks Hudson until he was brought to Harrisburg," said Guffey. "I don't know anybody in the counties personally. I haven't communicated with anybody."

Many Charges Made.

Philadelphia, April 22 (AP).—A call for an investigation by G-men rose today above a cross-fire of charges in the Democratic factional fight of Pennsylvania's primary election campaign.

John B. Kelly, chairman of the Philadelphia Democratic organization, accused Senator Joseph F. Guffey of political coercion among WPA workers in Pennsylvania. Kelly asked President Roosevelt for an inquiry by the Federal Bureau of Investigation, so that "facts may be ascertained and prosecutions instituted."

The appeal to the President topped a day high-lighted also by these developments:

Attorney General Charles J. Margiotti, candidate for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, made ready to investigate the State Authority, which is spending $65,000,000 on new State construction.

Gov. George H. Earle, campaigning for the Democratic nomination for the United States Senate at the May 17 primary, declined comment on the investigation—which was asked by his opponent, Mayor S. Davis Wilson, of Philadelphia. At Harrisburg, however, Earle's office announced State police stood ready to help.

Loan Charges Made.

In his telegram to the President, Kelly asserted:

"I have undeniable evidence that Senator Guffey is coercing WPA workers, something that was never permitted by you in your campaigns, through his publicity director, Edward N. Jones, former (State) WPA administrator."

Guffey is supporting Lieut. Gov. Thomas Kennedy for Governor—Kennedy having been advanced by his old friend, John L. Lewis, C. I. O. chief. Philadelphia's Mayor Wilson, although elected to his present office as a Republican, is on the C. I. O.-Guffey Democratic ticket for Senator.

Mayor Wilson has demanded an "explanation" of loans Governor Earle received from Matthew H. McCloskey, Philadelphia contractor and Democratic leader.

The Governor replied that McCloskey—a personal friend—loaned him money in 1935 and 1936 and that all but $8,000 had been repaid.

Meanwhile, it was announced at Harrisburg today that McCloskey's company has submitted the low bid of $3,362,000 for a new industrial school for boys.

Philadelphia, April 21 (AP).—Mrs. Presley Morgan Taylor, the former Constance Gardner, granddaughter of the late Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, of Massachusetts, sued today to divorce her third husband.

Vacation-Bound Teller Falls Dead

With his vacation check in his hand, William L. Alexander, 67, teller in cash vault of the Treasury Department, fell dead there yesterday.

Officials said they understood Alexander, who had been in failing health, had come to cash his check before taking a much-needed rest. He collapsed not far from the basement cash room of the Treasury. Alexander, who lived at 1424 Varnum street northwest, entered the service of the Treasury in 1901.

Madrid Units Slow Franco's Coast Advance

Insurgents Sink Militia Fleet, Take Many Prisoners.

By the United Press.

Hendaye, France, April 22.—Gen. Franco's drive to extend his foothold along the Mediterranean east coast was slowed tonight, frontier advices said, by heavily reinforced loyalist brigades shifted from the Madrid fronts.

However, the Spanish insurgent navy today sank a fleet of fishing boats in the Mediterranean off Vinaroz carrying detachments of loyalist militiamen southward to the Castellon fighting zone, insurgent headquarters at Salamanca announced.

Franco's navy, stringing a blockade along the east coast, was said to have encountered the fishing vessels off Vinaroz in the center of the 47-mile coastal strip captured by the insurgents to cut loyalist Spain in half.

Militiamen Saved.

The militiamen aboard the ships were taken off before the boats were sunk. They were described as recruits of the General Workers Union and the National Labor Federation, being transported southward from Tarragona, loyalist seaport 55 miles south of Barcelona.

Franco's Salamanca headquarters said that "large numbers" of the loyalist troops were taken aboard the insurgent warships and disarmed.

Salamanca's reports of the capture followed an announcement in Barcelona that violent battles between loyalist warships, aided by planes, and "Italian-type" submarines of the insurgents were occurring in the Mediterranean.

Loyalist and insurgent dispatches told of bitter fighting in the Castellon zone, 47 miles south of the besieged loyalist stronghold of Tortosa, where a double-pronted insurgent assault on the Albocaceralcala de Chivert highway appeared to have been stalled.

The loyalists from the southern sector of dismembered government Spain, under Gen. Jose Miaja, fought in defense of the highway to protect their communications to Valencia and prevent Franco from cutting off Madrid's base of supplies along the seaboard.

The loyalist government at Barcelona drafted nearly 100,000 civilians to build fortifications along the "Negrin line" of last defense east of the Ebro and Segre rivers.

Behind the line, named in honor of Premier Juan Negrin, will be massed 320,000 troops and Catalonia's schoolboy recruits of 18 years of age who have been summoned for army service. Thus, every able-bodied Catalan from 18 to 45 will be in the last-stand defense.

Along the highway from Tortosa to Vinaroz, insurgents reported the capture of Ulldecona, in a "mop-up" of scattered loyalist brigades in the Sierra Montsia hills.

The town had been an obstacle in Franco's occupation of the Ebro Delta and the consolidation of his forces for a final assault on Tortosa.

Miaja, on the Castellon front to inspire his troops, was said to have left Ulldecona only a few minutes before his troops were forced to flee.

More than 8,000 loyalist troops, including some units of the international brigades, still were trapped and cut off from their bases in the upper Cinca Valley and in the mountains south of the Ebro between Tortosa and Morella, where 5,500 loyalist prisoners have been taken by the insurgents in the last ten days.

Britain-Australia Flight Mark Set

Lympne, England, April 22 (AP).—H. F. Broadbent, Australian aviator, today clipped 13 hours and 54 minutes off the Australia to England solo flight record established by Jean Batten, New Zealand woman flier.

Broadbent landed at Lympne at 10:53 p. m., British time (4:52 p. m., Eastern Standard Time), 5 days 5 hours and 22 minutes after leaving Darwin.

Dionne Reunion Held Aim of Suit

Ottawa, April 22 (Canadian Press).—Reunion of the Dionne quintuplets with their family was said today by Henri St. Jacques, attorney for Oliva Dionne, to be the motive behind his request for a judicial investigation of their guardianship.

Gordon Conant, attorney general of Ontario, said he would take no action on Dionne's request for an investigation until he had studied a recent report by Percy D. Wilson, official guardian of minor children in Ontario.

Wilson is on the board of guardians along with Dr. Dafoe, Dionne and Judge J. A. Valin, of North Bay, Ontario.

Arrests in Tunisia Now Total 1,000

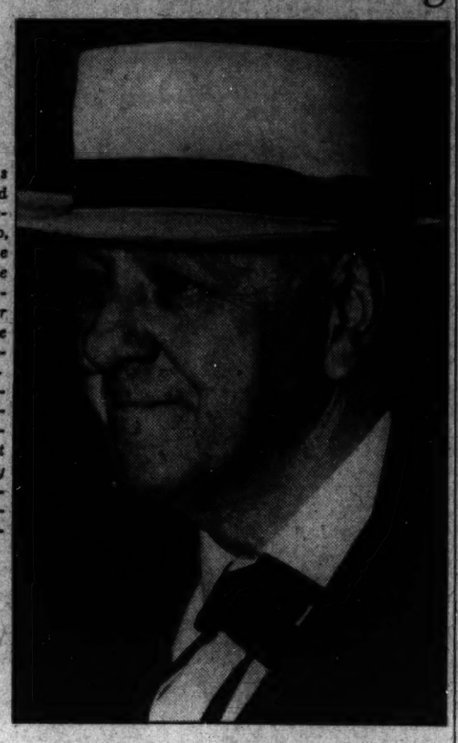
Paris, April 22 (AP).—French troops and police continued wholesale arrests today in Tunisia, French North African protectorate, in an effort to crush the Neodestour organization of nationalist natives.

At least 1,000 persons have been arrested since rioting, in which 13 persons were killed, broke out April 10. There were 114 arrests reported yesterday.

Earl of Clarendon Made King's Lord Chamberlain

London, April 22 (AP).—King George today appointed the Earl of Clarendon to succeed the Earl of Cromer as Lord Chamberlain, most important post in the King's household.

Josephus Daniels Flies Here To Mark His Golden Wedding



Josephus Daniels, United States Ambassador to Mexico, is shown as he arrived at the airport yesterday, in a jocular mood. He dodged questions on Mexico's expropriation of foreign-owned oil properties, but talked willingly about his approaching golden wedding anniversary.

'I've Come Home to Be Married,' Mexican Ambassador Replies to Questions About Oil Expropriation; He'll Attend A. P. Dinner.

Josephus Daniels, Ambassador to Mexico, arrived at Washington Airport yesterday with little to say about the expropriation of American oil interests but plenty to say about his approaching golden wedding.

The jocular 75-year-old newspaper editor and former Secretary of the Navy obligingly waved his pre-season Panama hat for the cameramen as he descended from his plane.

But for the reporters gathered to greet him, about all he would say was, "I've come home to be married." He referred all questions of United States policy in Mexico to Secretary Hull.

"I can say that any differences which may arise between this country and Mexico—understand, I'm not referring to what you are asking about—will be settled peacefully," he volunteered.

Daniels said he was on his way to New York to join in the Associated Press anniversary dinner on Monday. He is one of the founders of the Associated Press.

He said he would return to Washington next week on his way to Raleigh, N. C., where he would join his wife to celebrate their fiftieth wedding anniversary on May 2.

Ambassador Daniels was met at the airport by his son and daughter-in-law, Dr. and Mrs. Worth Daniels.

Gov. La Follette Calls Liberals To Conference

Forerunner of Third Party Seen in Rally Set for Thursday in Madison.

By the Associated Press.

Madison, Wis., April 22.—Gov. Philip F. La Follette tonight issued a call for a meeting of liberals in Madison next Thursday night which may be the forerunner of a national third party.

The Governor announced the meeting in the last of four radio speeches in which he called for organized public action to rout the depression, and for the third time assailed the trend of the Roosevelt Administration's recovery policies.

La Follette said he had invited between 3,000 and 4,000 persons with whom he had talked in the last three months.

Third Party Talk Rife.

At a press conference, the Governor said he expected the attendance would be mainly from the Midwest, but there might be others from Eastern States, including New York. He refused to divulge any names.

The Governor was noncommittal on whether he would seek a fourth term or run for the United States Senate. Possibility of a third party in 1940 led observers to speculate whther he might retire from office and devote his time to new party organization work.

La Follette praised the "brilliant leadership" of the Roosevelt Administration for showing the necessity for organized work, but said

"Instead of organized action to produce more, the main line has been organized action to produce less—on the one hand a policy of restricting production on the farm and in the factory, and on the other hand keeping millions of people out of production through relief, doles and made-work."

Notes Plight of Rails.

He did not disclose full details of his own plans for "wealth-creating work" but asked and answered this question:

"Why don't railroads modernize themselves? Because they are plastered from cellar to garret with mortgages—with bonds representing values that have largely disappeared. A government that saw the problem and had the courage to act could cut through the red tape in a few months.

"First, require an egineering survey (not a banker's, but an engineer's) to determine what is needed to give our country the most efficient transportation system in the world. Next, order that it be done. Then, a judicial proceeding permitting the new capital financing it to step in ahead of the old bonds.

"Thus we would put three or four billion dollars of idle capital to work, create millions of new jobs, and when done we would have something real to show for our money."

Italo-French Talks On Harmony Start

Rome, April 22 (U.P.).—Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano and the French charge d'affaires, Jules F. Blondel, today "struck at the core" of long-standing differences in a half-hour talk starting formal negotiations on an Italo-French friendship pact.

The conversation was curtailed by arrival at Littorio Airport of a British military plane bringing British War Minister Leslie Hore-Belisha to Rome for a public demonstration of the new accord uniting London and Rome after three years of estrangement.

Chinese Fleeing Entire Sector Above Suchow

Japan

peak which they described as "the front door to Yihsien."

The main Chinese column swung from the eastward toward a peak which overlooks the northeastern part of Yihsien, while the Chinese center, composed of three divisions under Gen. Sun Lien-chung, held the main road blocking an attack of Japanese tanks with their new German antitank guns.

Guns Box Chinese.

The Chinese were holding three of the four hilltops guarding the city but the fourth peak, the real key, remained in the hands of the Japanese.

The Japanese reinforcements began coming up in strength at dusk and a series of artillery battles developed with the Japanese fire increasing in intensity. Batteries concealed behind a hill cut the road to the west of Yihsien and boxed the Chinese regiments there.

Then a new Japanese barrage started from the west, east and south, centering on strong Chinese positions in a village called Tungshan-ku.

To Stay to Death.

I talked with one unit in a village south of Yihsien. The commander said his orders were to cover the retreat and that he would stay as long as he had any men.

Farther south I came on another Chinese column still attacking a Japanese position on a hilltop. The commander said he had no orders to retreat. His men had taken the first two levels of the hill and were attempting to get at a detachment of Japanese on a Rocky shelf about 100 yards nearer the peak. The Japanese were barricaded behind stone redoubts.

The Chinese had a number of batteries of artillery, but could not shell the position because of its high angle. They said they had been attacking it each night for several days but had been repulsed each time by Japanese hand grenades and machine gun fire.

Chinese Dead Litter Hill.

Chinese dead were scattered all over the slope.

When I finally reached Gen. Li's headquarters he admitted the whole Yihsien sector was being evacuated. He said that a column of 5,000 Japanese, advancing behind mechanized artillery, broke through the Chinese east flank.

By 1 p. m. Thursday the Japanese advance was assuming the proportions of a general attack. Their heavy artillery was roaring constantly on a 22-mile line between Yihsien and Taierchwang, following their occupation of all the strategic hilltop positions.

A Chinese effort to encircle the batteries, carried out by picked units from the commands of Gens. Sun Lien-chung, Yu Hsueh-chung, Pang Ping-hsun and Tank En-poi was broken up by murderous fire from mechanized Japanese units advancing along every road.

Chinese to Float Loan

[At Hankow, temporary Chinese capital, the Chinese Ministry of Finance announced it would float a national defense loan of 500,000,000 Chinese dollars—about $139,0000,000—on May 1, the Associated Press reported. After the outbreak of the war the Chinese Government floated a war loan of half a billion Chinese dollars. On October 11 it was announced that the loan had been over half subscribed.—Editor's note.]

Japan Pays U.S. $2,214,007 to End Panay Case

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo, April 22.—One of the gravest international incidents of the Chinese-Japanese war, the sinking of the United States gunboat Panay, was closed officially today when Japan gave the United States a check for $2,214,007.36.

The check, handed to Eugene H. Dooman, counselor of the American embassy, by Seijiro Yoshizawa, director of the bureau of American affairs, paid in full the claims submitted by the United States a month ago today.

(Other demands made by the United States after the Panay and three Standard Oil vessels were bombed in the Yangtze River December 12 already had been settled. Japan accepted full responsibility for the incident and assured the United States the men responsible for the attack had been punished.)

Today's payment covered loss of the Panay and the Standard Oil vessels, compensation for the death of two of the Panay's crew and the captain of one of the Standard Oil boats, compensation for injury to 74 persons aboard the vessels, and loss of personal effects and ship's equipment. The United States did not ask for punitive damages.

The foreign office itemization of the payment showed the Standard Vacuum Oil Co. will receive $1,287,942—more than half of the total. Other large items included $268,337.35 for death and personal injury, $45,572.87 for loss of the Panay and $97,766.48 for loss of ship's equipment and supplies.

Plan to Give Up Post by October Is Denied by McNutt

Manila, April 22 (AP).—Paul V. McNutt, United States High Commissioner to the Philippines, today denied reports he would resign and return to the United States before October 1.

"I told President Roosevelt I would remain in the Philippines as long as necessary," McNutt said, "and if any emergency arose I would take care of it."

Specifically the commissioner denied the statement in Washington of Chairman Snyder (Democrat), Pennsylvania, that McNutt recently told an Appropriations sub-committee he would be back in the United States before October.

Frenchman With Clew To Nameless Hero Dies

Paris, April 22 (U.P.).—Maj. Louis Le Spinasse, 70, the only man who had a clew to the identity of France's Unknown Soldier or knew from what battlefield the body was taken to rest beneath the Arc de Triomphe, died last night at his home in Pau.

In 1920, Le Spinasse was placed in command of a guard over eight coffins, one of which was to be chosen as that of the anonymous national hero. He alone knew the origin of each body.

Nazis Soften, Allowing Niemoeller Communion

Berlin, April 22 (AP).—The Rev. Martin Niemoeller, Protestant pastor, according to information just received by his congregation, was permitted to take the Lord's Supper a few days ago in his cell in Sachsenhausen concentration camp near Oranienburg, where he is in "protective custody." He is permitted to read Adolf Hitler's personal organ, the daily Voelkischer Beobachter, the Nazi illustrated weekly, Illustrierte Beobachter, and occasionally a few books.

Britain, Ireland Reach Accord On 'Highspots'

De Valera's Dream of United Isle Believed Defeated in London.

By the Associated Press.

London, April 22.—Britain and Ireland today reached an agreement on long-standing differences.

Details were withheld by the dominions office which announced conclusion of the accord after three months of negotiations headed by Britain's Prime Minister Chamberlain and Prime Minister Eamon De Valera of Ireland.

But the fact De Valera shelved his bitter feud with the United Kingdom to reach the agreement made it the most important development in their relations since the partition of all Ireland in 1922.

It was regarded certain that De Valera had been frustrated in his dream for a united Ireland, at least for the present.

Selection of Protestant Dr. Douglas Hyde as presidential candidate of Ireland's two largest political parties in the May 31 election was interpreted as a gesture toward separated northern Ireland where Protestants are in the majority.

Dr. Hyde's election became a certainty when Alfred (Alfie) Byrne, Dublin's lord mayor, decided to abandon his plans to run as an independent candidate.

$232,969,029 Is Given In U. S. Cotton Loans

By the Associated Press.

The Commodity Credit Corporation reported yesterday loans totaling $232,969,029 on 5,332,809 bales of cotton through April 21. This included loans of 6,343,528 on 151,508 bales, which had been paid and the cotton released.

A Big Responsibility.

The poll to be conducted in Washington a week from today has aroused more enthusiasm over suffrage for the District than any event in recent years. A large number of civic organizations have joined in the movement. Several legislators on Capitol Hill have interested themselves in the campaign, and there seems to be a good chance that a representative vote will be cast.

It is not to be supposed that an unofficial poll of this sort will bring forth a conclusive answer to the question of what type of government Washingtonians want. But there is every promise that it will reflect the general trend of thought. Citizens therefore ought to take advantage of this opportunity to record their views whether they favor national representation for the District, a local government elected by the people or continuation of the present regime in modified form.

Not much has been heard from the opponents of suffrage. Every Washingtonian must be aware of the fact, however, that a number of intelligent citizens prefer the present set-up in spite of its obvious shortcomings. Leaders of this group might well come out with their arguments. Full and free public debate is the first step toward improvement of conditions which a very large percentage of the people regard as unsatisfactory.

Next Saturday's poll is sponsored by the Citizens' Conference on District Suffrage, representing numerous organizations properly eager to secure a large affirmative vote. That fact need not call into question the results of the poll. But it does put an obligation upon the Citizens' Conference to be scrupulously fair in its conduct of the poll. This group of civic-minded Washingtonians has voluntarily assumed a heavy responsibility. The success of their venture will depend in large measure upon the objectivity with which it is directed.

Some fear has been expressed that, since no registration is required for participation, some individuals may vote in more than one district. That abuse might be practiced by opponents as well as proponents of suffrage. It does not appear likely, however, that any substantial number of citizens would attempt so cheap a practice, particularly since only an expression of opinion is sought.

The biggest task of the sponsors will be to induce citizens to visit one polling place. Yet every precaution that can be taken to keep the poll above question of bias or abuse will enhance its usefulness.

"Dear Little Branch."

The likelihood that the Catholic Gaels will unanimously choose an Anglo-Irish Protestant as the first president of their new republic may seem at first glance just another of those paradoxes that caused the late G. K. Chesterton to define the Irish as the people "that God made mad." But to anyone with the least acquaintance with twentieth century Irish history, and with the life and work of Douglas Hyde, the choice must seem beautifully consistent and appropriate.

In the 78 years of his life Dr. Hyde is said never once to have uttered any positive opinion about any political controversy—surely a reticence no Irishman, Catholic or Protestant, could have maintained save by the exercise of the most profound political genius. All the same, Dr. Hyde had probably played a greater part than any other living Irishman in arousing those emotions and purposes which have crystallized in the new Irish nation. He is perhaps the greatest modern scholar in the Irish language and its literature. His anthologies of the folk poetry of Connacht, his preservation of the poems of the famous Rafferty and other wandering poets, and most of all his part in the foundation of the Gaelic League for the propagation of the Irish tongue, have helped to reanimate a racial consciousness that at the end of the nineteenth century appeared almost extinct.

One by-product of the Gaelic revival was the so-called Irish literary renaissance. Another was the political movement which found its expression in Arthur Griffith's newspaper Sinn Fein. These words, meaning roughly "ourselves to ourselves," came presently to designate all the resurgent nationalist forces which were presently to create the Irish volunteers, the Eastern Rebellion, the resistance to World War conscription, the "troubles," the Treaty, the Civil War, the Saorstat and ultimately the new republic.

It would appear that under the new constitution the office of president is to be largely symbolic. If so, no more congruous symbol could be desired than the man whose greatest delight is to be called by a line from one of his own poems "An Craoibhin Aoibhinn"—"the dear little branch."

The Desterilization Process.

Current statements concerning the release and utilization of previously sterilized gold are confusing and mystifying to people unfamiliar with the complexities of our manipulated monetary and credit system. Since gold no longer circulates, and cannot be legally held even by the Federal Reserve banks, how can it possibly be released for spending? The answer, of course, is that the gold itself does not move from the vaults where it is stored. The first step taken to "release" or "desterilize" the gold which the Treasury acquired by borrowing and had set aside in an inactive fund, is to issue gold certificates against it and deposit them with the Federal Reserve banks. By such means, the Treasury increases its cash balances with the Reserve banks to an equal amount.

The last bank statement shows very clearly the changes resulting from "desterilization." During the week ended April 20, gold certificates held by the Federal Reserve banks increased approximately $1,400,000,000, while the Treasury's deposits rose from a mere $141,000,000 to a record total of more than $1,400,000,000. The fact that the increase in the Treasury's balance was not quite as great as the gain in gold certificates simply indicates that some spending of funds occurred during the week.

The second step in the "desterilization" process comes when the Treasury's deposits with the Reserve banks are drawn against or spent for various purposes. That is the only way in which gold can be "released." Even gold certificates are banned as a circulating medium although they are held by the Reserve banks as reserves in lieu of gold.

To put the released funds in circulation the Treasury may use them to meet current expenses, as it would other balances in its general fund or it may apply them to repayment of public debt. For the time being Secretary Morgenthau intends to use $50,000,000 of his "desterilized" funds each week to pay off one-half of the maturing issues of short-term Treasury bills, instead of renewing them as has been the practice. So long as this policy of debt retirement is followed, funds will be freed by payments to holders of bills, adding to the idle resources of the banks. Cash disbursements to meet current Government outlays will further increase the volume of excess reserves amounting to the huge total of $2,490,000,000 after recent reductions in reserve requirements.

By thus cutting down, if only temporarily, the amount of Government issues available for investment the pressure upon the banks to utilize their idle funds in other ways is increased. Prior to Secretary Morgenthau's Thursday announcement, the prospect of further additions to excess reserves stimulated demands for Government securities and resulted in Reserve bank sales of bonds to prevent an unduly rapid rise in prices. Thus, a rush to invest in Government issues is brought about by a program that gives rise to new fears for the stability of the Federal credit.

The explanation of this seeming paradox is simple. As a result of monetary and credit manipulation a great volume of unutilized funds has been placed at the disposal of the banks at a time when outlets for their employment in private industry are severely limited. Consequently, the banks have eagerly absorbed new issues of Government securities at abnormally low rates of interest, regarding them as the safest form of investment under present conditions, regardless of what the future may hold in store. So far efforts to force these idle reserves into more varied private channels have failed. Now the screws have been turned some more by simultaneously adding to the amount of excess reserves and cutting down the amount of weekly Treasury bill offerings.

The foundation for an enlarged spending-borrowing program has certainly been extended by the new program. It remains to be seen whether the banks will be persuaded to expand their loans for non-governmental purposes.

Senator Wheeler's Task.

As chairman of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee Senator Wheeler faces the most responsible and difficult task of devising some form of legislative relief for the railroads. His work will be the harder because of the lack of Administration advice and guidance—an omission especially conspicuous in view of the pressing nature of the emergency confronting the roads. The Splawn report, devoted chiefly to a discussion of long-range plans, is also of little use, as Senator Wheeler thinks it would be impossible to pass permanent legislation of the type recommended at the present session of Congress.

Senator Wheeler himself does not favor loans to keep roads out of bankruptcy, unless there is reasonable hope that temporary assistance will tide them over until business improves. His evident preoccupation with the problem of finding employment for railway labor let out or laid off in recent months is a tacit acknowledgment that the problem of wages and labor costs calls for immediate attention. He is said to be considering a suggestion that the Government should meet the labor costs on maintenance work in order to provide employment for furloughed workers.

Such a plan, however, would not satisfy the pressing need for reductions in operating expenses, except as it resulted in shifting men now employed from private to public pay rolls. The need for reductions in labor costs through cuts in rates of pay, changes in working rules, or by both methods, has been quite clearly shown and virtually conceded to be essential by the Splawn committee. Yet Senator Wheeler, said to sympathize with the brotherhoods' opposition to pay cuts, has so far avoided discussion of the subject.

It is to be hoped that this cautious avoidance of a subject that is politically dangerous does not mean that any consideration of wage reductions as part of a program of emergency relief is necessarily banned. While these are matters that primarily concern the railway managements and the unions, and do not require legislative action, the scope, character and effectiveness of any legislative plan will necessarily be affected by the wage policies followed.

In The Ninth Long Year.

"Bread and butter," wrote former Gov. Landon in the speech delivered for him at Topeka yesterday, "is more realistic when you're hungry than the Constitution."

The homely aphorism is not subject to challenge. When men are starving they do not stop to consider whether democracy or dictatorship is theoretically the more desirable. They act, blindly and instinctively, to secure that form of rule which promises them the elemental satisfactions required by life. To criticize the wisdom of such actions is meaningless when it is not smug. For, as Mr. Landon says, "a desperate people will always accept the man on horseback."

Undoubtedly President Roosevelt realizes this as clearly as his opponent in the 1936 election. And an easy, superficial, unimaginative way to postpone current difficulties is to resort to a spending program which seeks to stimulate production as well as to provide relief for all who are in need. But, as Mr. Landon points out, it is only storing up trouble to meet the problem of unemployment in this manner. Where, he asks, does a protracted inflationary program lead? And his irrefutable answer is that "disaster inevitably is the final result."

It was a pessimistic speech which the former Governor of Kansas prepared for the Optimist Club of Topeka. To many it may seem unduly pessimistic. Yet pessimism intended to dissipate a false sense of security is a healthy corrective to that blind optimism which pays no heed to the future. And of that grasshopper type of optimism too much is abroad today.

This is a wonderfully rich and resourceful country. Because generations of thrifty hard-working Americans have bequeathed an enormous heritage it is possible for us, their heirs, to be spendthrift in a way no other people could attempt to emulate. But few are so foolish as to believe that the inherited trust is inexhaustible. The President certainly knows better. In the famous economy message, of March 10, 1933, he pointed out that "for three long years the Federal Government has been on the road toward bankruptcy," adding that in this trend "the very stability of our Government itself is concerned."

None can fairly call Mr. Landon a Jeremiah for giving warning, in the present ninth long year of continuous deficit financing, as to the "rocks of loose fiscal policy" which concerned Mr. Roosevelt over five years ago. The danger to the national credit is now much greater than when the President assured the Nation that "the members of Congress and I are pledged to immediate economy." And the danger is the more serious just because many have forgotten those earlier warnings and have begun to assume that "this intoxicating hilarity of inflation" can go on forever.

Mr. Roosevelt has forgotten his economy pledges. It does not follow that Congress will be equally lighthearted in choosing the seductive downhill path as a rational way of escaping present difficulties. It is to Congress, and to the common-sense Americans whom Congress represents, that Mr. Landon addresses his plea for considering the spending program with clear vision. He does not exaggerate when he says that without courage of this variety "we're in for a smash in terms of bread and butter."

If we had as much to say as a tobacco auctioneer does, we'd get up earlier.

"Prosperity is ahead of us."—Henry Ford. And still increasing its lead, it seems.

Night in and night out, the best acting in radio studios is done by the hired applauders.

The reason the people of this country have so little time is because they're always in a hurry.

The older a person gets, the more discriminating he becomes, and the more he enjoys his own company.

"T. B. Castellow, former Congressman, of Fort Gaines, Ga., is quitting farming to hunt lions."—Press report. Getting soft, eh?

It might be well to bear in mind that while "billion" and "million" are similar in sound their ratio is the same as that of a $10 bill and a penny.

"The defendant testified that he had no idea of why his wife shot at him with a rifle."—From a news story. Maybe she was trying to kill him.

"Birth Of A Baby."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have wondered if any women were concerned in the authorship of your editorial of April 14, "Birth of a Baby." Perhaps the writer considered it a question not in a "woman's sphere" of discussion. Judging from camera newsmen's work, frequent first page reports of stork activities, reports of lectures, etc., it is a question no longer assigned to a woman's "sphere." It just about leaves her without even the sphere to which men have always relegated her when they wanted to get her out of the way. For if that sphere doesn't belong to her, she has none of any kind.

You were quite right in finally deciding that such films as this association of men planned to exhibit were inadvisable. But it seemed out of place for editorial comment unless for the briefest kind of adverse dismissal, unargued. This frankness of which you speak is entirely at the expense of the reserves of one sex and participated in by the other. Of course no woman's life would ever be saved or even made more bearable by such films. But the incomes of the film producers would expand. And judging from the outside of shows previously given over to such purposes, the men would compose most of the audience.

Not only in regard to this editorial, but generally there is little sympathy extended to women in your columns except the editorial written with great feeling, concerning the wife-beater who was finally subjected to the prison-beater at Baltimore. While it is revolting to consider either capital or corporal punishment, after all this man received what he had given, many times, to a woman. And tempered with our feeling of condemnation for his wife's wish to be present, should be the contemplation of the savage state which a human being would reach, when repeatedly humiliated by blows.

I have known so many fine women. They're not all frivolous spenders, selfish and demanding. But it would save resentment against your columns to have them occasionally referred to. Don't you know any? You are fine on politics and news. Can't you do a little better about women? G. E. C.

The Jefferson Memorial.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Anent the discussion of the Jefferson Memorial, I wish to indorse most heartily "A. E. A.'s" suggestion in The Post of April 21 that we forget the Tidal Basin location and all the bitterness and futile discussion it has engendered and put the memorial "across the river on the Mount Vernon boulevard, where it will stand out by itself, competing with nothing else, and be a joy to all."

I can imagine nothing more in harmony with the spirit of Jefferson than to put his memorial on his native soil, commanding a view of the majestic Potomac and the beautiful Capital of the Nation he served so well. WALTER H. BEAL.
Washington, April 21.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: An educational institution should be Jefferson's memorial — a Federal university to conduct scientific work in law, administrative studies, in medicine and in literature. Selected graduates from the State universities should be brought to such a learned institute on scholarships. Washington would have what every national capital has—a great university connected with its libraries, laboratories and governmental departments.

As a part of this university there should be a college for the poor of this section who cannot afford the high tuition of private colleges. It should be like a State college. This would be a better memorial for Jefferson than a Greek tomb and it would aid the people whom he would serve. GLADYS ARTBEE.
Washington, April 19.

Reluctant Rebels.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Dr. Glenn Frank, generalissimo of the new Republicans, declares himself to be only a "reluctant rebel" against the New Deal. This reluctance indicates that he possesses a divided mind which impels him in two opposite directions at the same time. He is constrained to approve the many acknowledged good features of the New Deal while eschewing only those features which experience has proved to be unwise and unworkable. Thus the new Republican leadership tacitly stamps itself as an intellectual bankrupt, devoid of originality or constructive proposals to combat the economic and industrial philosophy presented by President Roosevelt.

The constructive policies of the Republican Party in the heyday of its glory and grandeur saved the Union, abolished slavery, rewrote the Constitution, laid the foundation for material prosperity and made the United States the greatest nation on the face of the earth. But now to witness the Grand Old Party standing impotently by expecting to profiteer upon its rival's mistakes is pathetic. It is disappointing and surprising to observe the progressive bloc of Western Republicans which promised to furnish progressive leadership for the party and for the Nation, now seemingly affected with paralysis. Senator Norris retains his courage and aggression only by bolting his party.

The new leadership of the Republican Party must bring forth a new program to supplant the New Deal by showing the people a more excellent way if it hopes for victory in the forthcoming Congressional and Presidential elections. Dr. Frank cannot hope to retrieve the lost fortunes of the Grand Old Party by the negative doctrine of the reluctant rebel. KELLY MILLER.
Washington, April 20.

Calls For Garner.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: For six years the New Dealer has "planned it that way" and we now have as many, if not more unemployed "employables" than we had six years ago and the 1930-33 depression still is with us unliquidated in the form of an increased national debt.

What we need is a change in Administration. In England, France and other democratic countries the refusal of Congress to pass the awful "reorganization" bill, the court-packing bill and the mess of a so-called wage-hour bill would have resulted in the resignation of New Dealer No. 1. And that is what ought to happen here for the country's and the people's sake. Let Democrat Cactus Jack Garner take charge. REAL DEMOCRAT.
Washington, April 21.

Snake Bounty?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I believe if this Congress will pass a bounty of $1 each on the poison snakes for the entire United States that in a few years they will become almost extinct.

Mountain people always kill these snakes whenever found but unless a bounty is offered they do not bother to go to their dens.

How Wars Are Won.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Gen. Butler is right. Wars are not won by argument. This has been true from David and Goliath on down the ages. The spirit and character of the people and the will of the god of battles win all wars.
J. D. KLEIN.
East Falls Church, Va., April 19.

Obstacles To Recovery.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your editorial entitled "The Essentials of Recovery," which appeared in The Post of April 18, you detail what in your opinion are the "primary causes of the current reverses." I quote: "Reckless spending policies, together with the bewilderment and uncertainty created by the Administration's experiments in 'planned economy' and its assaults upon business, have been primary causes of the current reverses."

May I call to your attention the opinion of another editor who could not be accused of being either a Democrat, a New Dealer or a supporter of Franklin D. Roosevelt either "before Chicago" or after? This editor is none other than William Allen White, the sage of Emporia, who voted for Landon in 1936 and for all Republican candidates for President since 1912 when he "flew the coop" and voted for Theodore Roosevelt.

In response to an inquiry sent out by "Editor & Publisher," which was "With many essential elements of recovery present, what principal obstacle prevents it?" Mr. White's reply in part was:

"The obstacle to the thing we call recovery is not fear of one man. If Roosevelt, Hitler, Mussolini and Stalin all were to die within a month, the obstacle would remain. For hundreds of millions of men, round pegs in square industrial holes not functioning fully to capacity, although our presidents and directors all were dead, would still feel that the distributive system of Christendom is not perfect . . .

"Universal education and the common use of machinery, have fused a new dynamite of discontent in the world. In Europe, the common man has turned futilely to the dictator. Soon the dictator will pass. In America, the forgotten man turned to Roosevelt. Roosevelt also is temporary. His followers are here to stay. Unless the wisdom of man can find some fair way to secure exceptional rewards to exceptional men who have organizing talents and at the same time to establish a universally high standard of living which will satisfy the common man who has only a common talent, we shall have no peace in business or industry.

"It is a world problem facing modern man. No leader nor any small group of men is the menace. The menace is inherent in the problem of the distribution of income. Neither side is right."

I thought perhaps you might enjoy the breadth of view as expressed by a Republican far removed from the scene of so many jitterings as obtain in the City of Washington and thus be enabled to approach the discussion of the obstacles to recovery with less restriction than is manifest in your statement above quoted and in which you reveal the fact that you have not quite comprehended all the lessons that our economic situation is designed to teach.

Legalized Gambling.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I do not believe that any of us want to see Washington become a Monte Carlo and I am willing to concede some virtue in the vigilance of the authorities to prevent such from happening. Nevertheless, I am inclined to believe that the time has come to face facts. It is quite evident that the American people want some sort of legalized gambling in which the masses may engage nd I have heard no arguments yet which can discourage this opinion.
CHARLES H. FLAGG.
Washington, April 14.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I must confess that I cannot see anything less harmful than this little clean-cut, cheerful game called "numbers." Just whom does it hurt?

I do not advertise the game, but I do advocate a milder, less stringent law against it. Namely, a license, the same as that for liquor.

The Post Impressionist

Looking Backward.

"HE hath removed our ancient landmarks," observed the Old Timer as he stood at the corner of Fourteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue and permitted his eyes to sweep over that part of Washington bounded by Fifteenth street, the Mall, Grant Monument and Pennsylvania avenue.

"There was Harris' Bijou Theater at Ninth and the Avenue. The boys called it the 'By-Joe.' It was the home of melodrama—Bartley Campbell's 'White Slave' and Ada Gray in 'East Lynne.' The popular Ada persisted in youthful roles there at a time when it appeared that her exits and entrances had to be expedited with a derrick. And Sis Hopkins, known to the theatrical world as Rose Melville, the clever little Franklin, Ind., comedienne whose first appearance with Mathews and Bulger in 'By the Sad Sea Waves,' in an ingenue role, was such a howling success that it carried her to stardom.

"'My mother told me never to do nothin' for nobody what won't do nothin' for me,' said 'Sis' as she fumbled the golden hair hanging down her back in braids. And 'My brother is a piano tuner, but business was so bad he got a job tightenin' barbed-wire fences.'

* * *

"But there was tragedy also," the Old Timer went on. "Just south of the National Theater, where the Farm Loan Board now dispenses manna to the farmers from the old Southern Railway Building, was located in the last decade of the last century the Globe Theater, a one-story building with a mosquelike effect and a front porch from which a German band of ten pieces called scoffers from the street. About 3 p. m. the band would break loose in the most raucous of sounds and a banner would be displayed from the outer walls with the inscription: 'James Owen O'Connor, the Great Shakespearian Tragedian.'

"The crowds would begin moving in the direction of the theater, pockets bulging with green grocer supplies. As a prelude, two stagehands would appear and stretch a net and the stage manager would announce the impending appearance of the great actor and, in stentorian tones, direct:

"'The management begs to announce the tradesmen's entrance is in the alley at the rear and deliveries of vegetables should be made there.'

"But it went unheeded. With the first words of 'To be or not to be' the shower started. Everything, from cabbages to dog fennel, fell in profusion around the hapless tragedian as he strode back and forth behind the poor protection of the net, with his right hand securely anchored between the second and third buttons of his Prince Albert coat. A fortune may not have been accumulated by O'Connor from his histrionic effort, but he should have acquired a fair fund for his declining years from the sale of garden truck.

"And that reminds me," continued the Old Timer, "that I read recently that the Cherry Sisters have abandoned their bakery and bull-pup emporium in Iowa to take to the road again. The first alarm of their approach comes from Chicago, where they submitted to an interview decrying liquor and fan dances.

"Well do I remember their appearance at Harris' Bijou. The entire Iowa colony in Washington, headed by the late Senator Allison, turned out to give them a hand.

"But all of the entertainment that was afforded by that section south of the Avenue didn't issue from theaters. Dennis Mullany, a student with more than ordinary knowledge of Irish folklore, held forth in a small frame building at the southwest corner of E street at Fourteenth. His Irish technique surpassed the quality of his beverage. His whiskey had a cabalistic symbol that looked, even as the beverage reacted, very much like the double cross. It sold for 10 cents a drink, even though you filled the glass to overflowing.

"Some of the newspaper crowd of the day insisted that to properly appreciate Dennis' whiskey one must approach it by degrees—and this meant starting at the popular Shoomaker's, in the vicinity, with a few pacemakers of the 15-cents-a-throw variety, until the state of inebriety had been arrived at where one didn't care what happened. Then to Dennis', where the only free lunch was the salted dried herring fish, which some contended were carefully brushed and revarnished every morning as a preliminary to opening the bar.

"One night, in accordance with a plan, a group of reporters came in, ordered drinks and fell to discussing the plans for a great marble white palace to be built by Shoomaker on the present site of the Municipal Building. This was vacant and unoccupied land, due to a recent fire that had destroyed the Capital Traction (then the Washington and Georgetown) Railway Building.

"'I understand a million dollars is to be expended,' said one, pitching his voice loud enough for Dennis to hear.

"Said another devil: 'I hear there will be a front entrance on Pennsylvania avenue for Senators, Representatives and diplomats and the upper crust, and a side entrance on Fourteenth street directly opposite Dennis' to decoy away his patronage. Dennis, why don't you get an injunction?'

"'Oh, no, boys,' replied the meek Dennis, 'I welcome the improvement. Besides, if it is to be as magnificent as you young men say, I will be able to live very well off the overflow trade.'"

Fair Enough

One Passenger's View.

TO START from scratch, I know no more about the railroad business than any man could learn from 20 years of clattering around the country as a customer on trains. Our trains are reliable and the fancy runs in the West have been glamoured up amazingly in the last few years in an effort to meet the competition of the planes. The getaway of a Santa Fe, Burlington or Union Pacific luxury train from Chicago, Los Angeles or San Francisco is comparable in festivity and swank to the sailing of the Isle de France or the Rex in the days of prohibition, when thirsty New Yorkers swarmed through them at night and got tight against time on the hospitality of departing friends.

PEGLER.

The fast train lies at her berth in the station, gleaming like a new tin kettle, the crew man their stations with their elbows bowed and their brass gleaming, the passengers go aboard with an air of personal importance, and parties gather in the bars and toss off quick ones in the nonchalant, toodle-oo manner of the British seeing their kinnery off for seven years in India—which is an affectation, of course, but all right.

You don't really drink a man away on a choo-choo ride. You go down to take a peek at the new train, which is worth seeing, and the publicity has made gala events of these departures. In Los Angeles, the widest-eyed fan town in the country where, even after all these years, the populace swarms in curious gangs to gawk at motion picture actors and pluck at them for autographs, the aisles of the Super-Chief are choked with sightseers up to the last instant before the man turns the handle and whips it out of the yard.

NO EUROPEAN train compares with any of these great special efforts of the American railroads in luxury or in the corps d'espirit of the crews. The men all seem conscious of elite rating in their respective departments, and the management struts its stuff with obvious pride. Bright metal and pretty colors adorn the interiors, and the switches and buttons for lights, fans, heaters and service in one of the new drawing rooms suggest the dashboard of a great passenger plane.

All right, but for all their high pressure publicity and passenger snatching, the lines which run the supertrains nevertheless are constantly telling prospective customers that, oh, my goodness, no, they can't possibly book reservations, except upper, in less than three weeks, and that, to get a single room or compartment, one really should give them a little more time.

I began by saying that I knew nothing about the railroad business, but I know the passenger's problems, and the majority of passengers haven't the remotest idea what they will be doing three weeks from any given date. Passengers, particularly those who need the speed which these lines have to sell, often undertake such trips on a few hours' or one day's notice and find themselves far down on the waiting lists or offered a double or three-passenger room at a very high price as an expensive alternative to the wretched and unanimously detested upper berth. They are even supposed to be a little grateful for this.

• • • •

THE SINGLE ROOM, the most sensible accommodation for the single-handed passenger on the overnight or longer hauls, is seldom to be had on any line. Even on five days' notice, I have been told that there were no single rooms available, and my usual experience is that they are all out of compartments, too, but by a rare break of luck are able to offer a drawing room at a rental, including a wanton waste of railroad fare, which would pay for a five-room flat for a month. This seems to be the rule rather than the unusual experience on railroads going to Florida and other Southern areas and on shorter notice is common on trains running between New York and Chicago.

They have their excuses and explanations. I have heard them, but always with a suspicion that the Pullman company or the railroad was putting the squeeze on the customer. Five days or a week is enough notice to reserve a room on a train in France or Italy, where the railroads, being state institutions, are notoriously indifferent to the customers' problems. On five days' notice a steamship company will provide a suite or a single room to Europe or around the world.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Mr. Ford and the President.

Franklin—Hello, Henry. How are you feeling today?

Henry—I'm all right today; it's tomorrow that worries me.

• • • •

Franklin—Don't worry; everything is going to come out all right. How is everything in Detroit?

Henry—Must you bring that up?

• • • •

President—I see where you and Mrs. Ford celebrated your fiftieth wedding anniversary recently. It must be wonderful to be married to a woman all those years.

Henry—It's one thing nobody can devalue, anyhow.

President—You're correct there, Henry.

Henry—You've been married many years, too, Mister President.

President—Yes, if you count the time Mrs. Roosevelt is not home.

• • • •

Henry—Mr. President, I see you are taking to pump-priming again.

President—Yes; are you against it?

Henry—Well, I'm against carrying the pump as a necessary accessory. I think it should be extra equipment, rarely used.

President—When you're in a ditch you've got to get out of it.

Henry—As the builder of the old Model T I ought to know all there is to know about that.

President—If you'd stayed in the ditch where would you have been today?

• • • •

Henry—Don't forget I built a better car.

President—Don't forget I am building a better America.

Henry—I think that is open to question, Franklin.

Henry—Often. And, besides, you should remember that I never tried to turn out more than one model per year.

President—I favor new models of government as fast as there is need of them.

Henry—Yes, but the change should never be so rapid or so radical that the customer can't tell the front end from the rear.

• • • •

President—Henry, I'm just in the same situation you were once. When you were struggling with the auto, nearly everybody criticized you and thought you were crazy. But you kept experimenting until you proved you were right.

Henry—But don't overlook one thing.

Franklin—What?

Henry—When I was doing all that early experimenting I was the sole occupant of the car!

• • • •

Franklin—It's very difficult talking with you industrialists. You criticize but do not help. What would you do in my place?

Henry—The first thing I'd do would be to analyze the voices of some of my advisers very carefully, with special determination to distinguish their suggestions from body squeaks.

Franklin—Every time I hear anything that sounds like a body squeak I KNOW it's a Republican. Have you any other suggestions?

Henry—Well, you might watch your oil, water and gas.

Fulpan Makes Appointment

By Louis M. Jiggitts,
Special Correspondence of The Post.

Petunia.
March 24, 1938.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.
Dear Congressman Fulpan:

As an admirer of yours I am writing to let you know there is a depression here and it's not doing you any good. I was talking to Mrs. Fannie Sitz yesterday about organizing the ladies for you this summer and she told me about Mr. Hezekiah Hawks bragging a few days ago that he and the depression are going to cut your career right to the nub this time, and Miss Fannie Blotz is organizing an Anti-Fulpan and Anti-Depression Society at Detour.

I am glad to tell you that all of my kin in Detour, Biddlesville and Amen Corner are going to work for you, I hope. But Mrs. Sitz said that you had better do something about Detour as soon as you can.

Please let me know what you are going to do about the depression, too, so I can spread it around at once. Why don't all you Democrats and Republicans get together?

Your admirer,
MOLLIE MOPP.

P. S. I suppose you know my nephew, Oscar Mopp, son of my brother, Dunk, of Detour, wants to go to the Naval Academy.

Washington, D. C.
March 26, 1938

Miss Mollie Mopp,
Petunia.
My dear Miss Mopp:

I regret that the Congressman is advising one of the committees today, but I can assure you that he will enjoy your very interesting letter. And I am glad to inform you that the Congressman is seriously considering priming the pump again, but at present is undetermined upon the amount. However, he realizes the great importance of dispelling the depression as soon as possible for obvious reasons and I feel sure that he will not consider the cost in obtaining the desired objective. As you know, the welfare of his constituents is his one great interest in life.

The Congressman has often remarked that it wouldn't be cricket for Democrats and Republicans to get togther.

Assuring you that it is a pleasure to hear from you, I am

Yours sincerely,
WILLA DOOLITTLE, Sec.

Petunia,
March 29, 1938.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.
Dear Congressman Fulpan:

I am glad you are going to do something about the depression at once as Mrs. Fannie Sitz went over to Detour yesterday and says she found it pretty bad. She said Miss Blotz already had eight members and said she was going to spread all over the district, with the motto: "Fight Fickle Fulpan and Down Dread Depression." But I am glad to tell you that Miss Blotz is under obligation to my brother, Dunk, and if we can get him enthusiastic it will help a great deal.

How long do you think the pump priming will last this time? And just what is this cricket people are always saying it wouldn't be?

Your admirer,
MOLLIE MOPP.

P. S. How about Oscar?

Washington, D. C.
March 31, 1938

Miss Mollie Mopp,
Petunia.
My dear Miss Mopp:

I regret that the Congressman has found it necessary to confer with the other leaders today on how to expedite the pump priming, but in his absence I am glad to answer your inquiry. Cricket is a game you play with a flat-sided bat and ball thrown with a stiff over-arm. The batter can hit it frontwards and backwards and he runs to first base and back as many times as he can. The game starts after lunch and proceeds until 4 o'clock when the players stop to drink tea and eat scones and marmalade. If they don't finish before dark they start the next afternoon and play until tea time again and so on until the game is over.

The English think it is fun.

I am glad to inform you that the Congressman feels confident that the new pump priming will last sufficiently long to be of benefit to all parties chiefly concerned. And for certain reasons he considers highly important he has just informed the other leaders that they must add at least another billion to the present estimate.

I fear that the Congressman will regret to hear of Miss Blotz's activites, but, of course, he is so very busy solving the many intricate problems facing the country that he cannot give consideration to purely personal matters. As he has often remarked, a statesman cannot give thought to the political equation.

Trusting that you will keep us informed of future developments, and assuring you that the Congressman is always delighted to hear from a loyal supporter, I am,

Yours sincerely
WILLA DOOLITTLE, Sec.

CICERO FULPAN, M. C.

Petunia,
April 2, 1938.

Dear Congressman Fulpan:

I am thrilled over you appointing Oscar to the Naval Academy. My brother Dunk said you wired the good news yesterday.

I have told everybody here you would soon have the depression on the run and the new prosperity would certainly last through November.

Do you feel sure that Congress will spend all that money?

I was telling Mr. Pete Peedler about cricket and he said it must be something like town ball you and him used to play when you were very young men without the tea and marmalade. He told me to ask you if you remember the time when he put you out with that long throw that struck you right on the head? He said it was just a little while after that that you decided to be a lawyer and get in politics.

Thanking you again for what you have done for me and the country, I am,

Your admirer,
MOLLIE MOPP.

Washington, D. C.
April 4, 1938.

Miss Mollie Mopp,
Petunia.
Dear Miss Mopp:

I can assure you that the Congressman took great pleasure in doing a favor for his good friends, Mr. Dunk Mopp and yourself. He was extremely well pleased with the qualifications of Mr. Oscar Mopp.

I can also assure you that Congress will spend the money as the Congressman has advised. Everybody loves to spend; it's paying back that makes people mad.

I am sure the Congressman will remember the days Mr. Peedler spoke about. He is very fond of reminiscing and you can be assured that he recalls with pleasure Mr. Peedler's fine throw that struck him on the head.

Assuring you that we always enjoy your very splendid letters, I am

Yours sincerely,
WILLA DOOLITTLE, Sec.

Petunia,
April 6, 1938.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.
Dear Congressman Fulpan:

I was telling Mr. Punk Prise today about you appointing Oscar to the Naval Academy and what he said got me to thinking. He said he visited up there several years ago and they told him all about it. He said Oscar would have to take Juice, Steam, Bull and Bones, and every time he took an examination, he would have to salute Tecumseh, or else. Why in the world does he have to take these and who is this Mr. Tecumseh? Does Mr. Tecumseh think he's Hitler? And he said if Oscar was greasy as a youngster, they would give him a buzzard. What would anybody want with a buzzard whether he was greasy or not?

I am not so sure Oscar ought to go now and I think you ought to make Congress investigate this Mr. Tecumseh before they have to start shouting Heil Tecumseh. With all this talk about dictatorship how can you afford to overlook this and keep me worried? Please let me hear from you at once.

Your admirer,
MOLLIE MOPP.

Washington, D. C.,
April 8, 1938.

Miss Mollie Mopp,
Petunia.
My dear Miss Mopp:

I regret that the Congressman is out of the city today, but I can assure you that he will be delighted to learn that Mr. Punk Prise got you to thinking.

You may also be sure that the Congressman will give his most serious consideration to the important matters mentioned in your very interesting letter as soon as he returns.

Yours sincerely,
WILLA DOOLITTLE, Sec.

Petunia,
April 10, 1938.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.
Dear Congressman Fulpan:

A lot of people here are beginning to wonder about you and the Naval Academy since I have told them about conditions there. We want to know at once what kind of Juice they use and Mr. Pete Peedler said it looks to him like if they have to take Bull and Steam they are more likely to turn out to be Congressmen than admirals.

But what is worrying people most is this Mr. Tecumseh. Are you letting dictatorship seep in? Do you want everybody in America shouting Heil Tecumseh while you are running all over the country on pleasure trips? Let me know if you are going to order a Congressional investigation at once to satisfy me.

Your admirer.

Miss Mollie Mopp,
Petunia.
My dear Miss Mopp:

I am delighted to put your mind to rest. The Congressman, as you know, maintains a research department for the benefit of his worthy constituents and is prepared to answer the most intricate inquiries. I am glad to inform you that the matters you mentioned are just names for studies, for example, Juice is electricity, Bones is hygiene and Steam is engineering. The names are merely local expressions, like in Petunia we say you are pie-eyed when you are stewed to the gills, meaning when you are full of hootch, and how.

I am also glad to inform you that Tecumseh is merely a statue in front of Bancroft Hall and the future admirals just salute it as a custom before exams to keep from being wooden, too.

When a cadet has grease he's savvy, or he's been currying the prof., and a buzzard is just a petty officer like a corporal in the Army or the third vice president of the bank.

Yours sincerely,
WILLA DOOLITTLE, Sec.

Petunia,

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.
Dear Congressman Fulpan:

I am too shocked for words! I have been president of the Petunia Temperance Society for five years and you say I am pie-eyed and stewed to the gills. I never expect to speak to you again, but I'll speak plenty about you this summer when you try to get back in Congress with your depression.

PETUNIA
TERRIBLE MISUNDERSTANDING STOP EXPLANATORY LETTER FOLLOWS
CICERO FULPAN, M. C.

Washington,
April 16, 1938.

Miss Mollie Mopp,
Petunia.
Dear Miss Mopp:

Not in my many years as your faithful servant in Congress have I been so profoundly disturbed as I am at this moment. When my able secretary wrote that "you are pie-eyed" she was using the word "you" in a strictly impersonal sense. Of course it never entered her mind that you, the beloved president of the Petunia Temperance Society, ever partook of intoxicating beverages. I can assure you that she regrets exceedingly the use of such an unfortunate illustration and is very unhappy. In fact, she is also suffering today from a severe headache.

I trust that you will accept my sincere apologies. I can assure you that I deeply regret the unfortunate incident, and I sincerely hope that you will overlook it.

Assuring you that I have only the profoundest admiration for you and trusting that our friendship of many years' standing will continue for many more years, I am, as ever,

Your good friend,
CICERO FULPAN, M. C.

Petunia,

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.
Dear Congressman Fulpan:

I accept your apology, and I have decided to let Oscar be an admiral. We are all very excited over it and I am already making plans to visit him on his flagship.

Everybody here thinks you will be re-elected, we hope.

Thanking you again for what you have done, I am still,

My dear Miss Mopp:

Your fine letter has pleased me very much. I am glad that young Mr. Mopp is going to attend the Naval Academy. I can assure you that the Academy is one of the very finest schools in the world and its graduates and undergraduates are the salts of the earth.

With kindest regards, I am, as always,

First Lady Will Open Better Homes Week

Mrs. Roosevelt, honorary president of the Girl Scouts, will launch Better Homes in America Week with a visit to the Girl Scouts' "Little House," 1750 New York avenue northwest, at 10 a. m. today.

The First Lady will plant a tree in the garden as a gift from the President's mother, Mrs. James Roosevelt, and will witness home-making demonstrations by the Scouts.

Farmer-Labor

By Harry W. Laidler

Toward A National Party.

AMERICAN LABOR and farming groups in this country are on the move politically as well as industrially. For decades, students of labor in the United States have been in the habit of contrasting the powerful political parties of labor abroad with the small developments in independent political action at home. Representatives of labor today are the premiers in the three Scandinavian countries—Norway, Sweden and Denmark. Labor and Socialist parties now constitute the largest single parties in France, Belgium, Switzerland and Finland. In Great Britain, the British Labor Party is "His Majesty's Chief Opposition." In Holland and Czechoslovakia, the Social Democratic parties constitute the second most powerful political groups in their respective countries. In far off New Zealand, labor in 1935 captured 53 out of the 80 seats in the New Zealand House of Representatives, while in Australia labor governments have for years alternated with conservative governments in the control of that British commonwealth. In Russia, the Communist Party dominates. In Spain, since 1931, labor has been a potent force in the political life of the country, though the future is uncertain.

On the other hand, in the United States, the useful workers in the city and rural districts have built no powerful party of their own on a national scale. The Socialist and Communist parties have continued to run Presidential candidates, and have had a marked effect on the economic and political thought of many sections of our population, but have not secured the support at election time of the great mass of the Nation's workers.

DURING the last few years, however, the growing importance of government in the lives of workers and farmers, our increasing economic insecurity, the marked developments in the field of trade union organization, the advance of the co-operative movement and other forces have led to notable progress toward the building of labor and farmer-labor parties in city, State and Nation.

During these years the Farmer-Labor Party of Minnesota has continued in control of the government of that State. The Farmer-Labor Progressive Federation of Wisconsin, organized through the initiative of farmer, labor, unemployed, progressive and Socialist groups and functioning through the Progressive Party, has become an important factor in the political life of that north central State. The American Labor Party of New York has, almost overnight, assumed leadership in New York City's Council and has become a distinct force in the legislative halls in Albany. In Illinois and New Jersey, State labor parties with considerable labor backing have recently been formed or are in the process of formation. In Detroit, Mich., a labor slate in 1937 secured nearly 37 per cent of the total votes cast for its candidates in the city elections. In Iowa, a small Farmer-Labor Party has run State tickets for several years past.

In about 30 States of the Union, Labor's Non-Partisan League has established branches. While in most of these States—as in Pennsylvania and Ohio—the branches are now working through the old parties in an attempt to secure the nomination of "progressive" candidates, in several, where they have been convinced that both old parties are "hopeless," they are encouraging the formation of a new party and are endeavoring to effect an alliance between farmer and labor groups. In many States, incipient labor and farmer-labor parties, trade unions, Commonwealth federations, farmers' organizations and Socialist and Communist groups are working toward the development of mass parties on a State-wide or national scale. In its 1937 convention, the Socialist Party declared: "The great awakening of the workers requires as its logical next step the development of independent working class political action. The Socialist Party, therefore, renews its advocacy and support of a genuine farmer-labor party" and urges its members "to give all possible support to the proper formation of such a party on a national scale."

THE REASONS for these developments toward a party of workers of hand and brain on the farms, in the factories, mines, shops and offices are not hard to find. For years labor and the farmer have seen the old parties controlled in the North and the South by entrenched propertied interests and by corrupt political machines. They have witnessed the two-party judiciary handing down decisions which well-nigh paralyzed labor's efforts to organize. They have observed the officers of the law breaking up their meetings and their picket lines and denying them their elementary constitutional rights. They have observed bill after bill, sponsored by labor and the farmers, utterly ignored or emasculated by Republican and Democratic legislators, or, if passed, indifferently enforced.

And they have witnessed America, under the political control of the parties of the propertied interests, subjecting the masses of its people to widespread insecurity, poverty and the threat of war, at a time when the natural resources, machinery and trained labor of the land could, if fully utilized for the commond good, insure a life of abundance and security to all.

• • • •

JUST WHEN the forces making for a new political alignment will result in the formation of a national Farmer-Labor Party it is impossible to say. Many are now contending that, if President Roosevelt is renominated in 1940, or if the Democrats run a "Roosevelt man," progressive labor and farmers in the main will support the Democratic candidate in that year. This is particularly true, they contend, if the C. I. O. and A. F. of L. have not by that time reached a working agreement. If, on the other hand, labor is again united, and the Democratic Party nominates a Presidential candidate unsatisfactory to the leadership of Labor's Non-Partisan League, a new political alignment on a national scale is by 1940 a probability.

There are others who contend that millions of workers in the city and on the farm are rapidly coming to the conclusion that New Deal democracy offers no solution for unemployment or for any of the other grave evils of our economic life, but on the other hand, that it is heading this country toward another war. These workers, they assert, are likely to demand by 1940 the formation of a national party of farmers and workers and the participation of this party in the Presidential campaign of that year, irrespective of the character of the Democratic candidate.

Spike's Adventure

The machine age may have enslaved most of this generation, but it is refreshing to learn that there are still some independent and self-sufficient souls remaining, who can subsist without a steam-heated apartment, a cafeteria or even a can-opener. Such a rugged individual is Alton (Spike) Draper, an Adirondack guide, who went alone into the forest two weeks ago, with no more assets of civilization than warm clothing and a hunting knife. There have been ten inches of snow since then, but Spike is doing nicely.

Reports as to his welfare come from diary pages left daily at a prearranged spot. These record that Spike first built a lean-to shelter and filled a pit with pine boughs for a bed. He found a porcupine on a ledge, lashed his knife to a pole with a mocassin string and speared several dinners. Snowbound, he stayed in all day and sharpened his knife. The porcupine yielded a bone fish-hook, and its intestines provided a line with which the modern primitive caught three brook trout. He broiled them for supper: "Boy, were they good!"

This little adventure of a guide's slack season gives new hope for the human race. Suppose the worst fears of the prophets of woe are realized; suppose every vestige of civilization is wiped out by the war lords, and the human race has to start afresh. We hope Spike and his hunting knife will be on hand, to show the more effete of us what self-reliance means, and to teach us the difficult art of snaring and cooking and relishing food from the forests.

Roosevelt Holds U.S. Neutrality Working Well as Law Permits

Policy Toward Spain Expected to Continue Unchanged; Swanson Rejects Plan to Limit Navy to a 'Frontier.'

By the Associated Press.

Informed officials concluded from President Roosevelt's statements at a press conference yesterday that the United States neutrality policy toward the Spanish civil war would continue in effect.

The President, in reply to a question as to whether he thought the neutrality policy as applied to Spain had been satisfactory, said he thought it had been so far as was possible under the law. (The neutrality law forbids arms shipments to either faction.)

The President said the neutrality act had a two-fold objective: To keep the United States from becoming involved in a war, and to avoid giving aid to one side against the other or of penalizing one side as opposed to other.

He added the act was difficult to apply.

Dissatisfied With Law.

Persons close to the State Department said neither the President nor Secretary Hull was satisfied with the act as it stood, but they did not favor its repeal.

Their lack of satisfaction, it was said, was based on the theory that it tied the Administration's hands too closely.

Meanwhile, Secretary Swanson informed Senator Bone (Democrat), Washington, in a letter made public yesterday that the Navy was opposed to creation of a naval "frontier" on the ground it would "hamper the free use of the fleet" in time of war.

Bone has proposed that the Navy's field of operations be confined to a "defensive sea area," including the region bounded by the Aleutian Islands, Midway Island, Hawaii, the Canal Zone, Virgin Islands and Maine.

Bone made public his own reply, which called the Secretary's attention to a clause in his proposed amendment which would permit the Navy to operate outside the frontier for the purpose of repelling attacks on the Western Hemisphere in time of war.

Members of the House Naval and Military committees will make a thorough check-up this summer on the Nation's defenses, from Maine to Hawaii and from the Panama Canal to Alaska.

The objective will be to obtain information to be used as the basis for future legislation to strengthen weak spots.

Chairman Vinson (Democrat), Georgia, of the Naval committee and Chairman May (Democrat), Kentucky, of the Military group said yesterday the survey would include every major navy yard, air base and emplacement of anti-aircraft and seacoast defense guns.

The tour may start in June and cover as much as 20,000 miles.

To Inspect Alaska.

Vinson said a subcommittee would "make a special trip to Alaska with reference to military needs for locating air, destroyer, submarine and mine bases there.

"They are going to be asked to go to Honolulu to look over the situation there. . . . They also will look over the advisability of a supply depot at Oakland, Calif."

May said the Gulf Coast also would be inspected, and that military committeemen would study coast defenses primarily to determine the need for new coast artillery and anti-aircraft guns.

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart.

Due Credit

Promptly, the United Federal Workers of America claim equal credit for the promise by Gen. Hines to make a comprehensive study of conditions among working personnel in the facilities. This column had laid the burden of credit with the American Federation of Government Employes, whereas it develops that the letter from Gen. Hines was sent to all employe organizations. The truth of the matter is this: The A. F. G. E. was quicker on the publicity ball; they know how to present a case for themselves.

And now, in stating its own case to us, the U. F. W. A. points out nine instances in which it has been responsible for correction of bad conditions in the V. A. facilities throughout the Nation.

In the light of what many believe to be a real threat to the jobs of many guards in the Park Service, the guards themselves continue serenely indifferent . . . One of the best parties of the year was the banquet tendered Thursday night by the newly enlarged I. D. R. A. And there a tip, or maybe one, was thrown to all Interior employes: The Secretary—in a brief appearance and a briefer speech—said he would like to see every Interior employe a member! This may be a signal for a great recruitment, for the Secretary's desire can be a very strong influence. And what would the I. D. R. A do with more members? Already it has some 1,500, and there's hardly a dance floor in town to accommodate such a crowd. Even at the banquet all who wanted to come couldn't be accommodated. The number was restricted to actual seating capacity in the cafeteria.

And for the success of the event we give credit where it is due, as follows: Stanley W. Cristhwait, Howard R. Stinson, Edward J. Kelly, Hillory A. Tolson, E. J. Armstrong, Samuel M. Barrett, S. P. Eagleton, Pierce M. Rice, Ian Forbes, Mrs. Eleanor C. Reid, Ruth Bohne, Frances Sue Brady, Esther Marchant, Marion McVey, Doris Rothwell, Merle Sager and the 18 men and women of the ticket sales committee.

Cinema Farce And Stage Bill Spell Earle Hit

'There's Always a Woman' Is Augmented by Ace Vaudeville Turns.

"THERE'S ALWAYS A WOMAN" Columbia Pictures filmization of a story by Wilson Collison, adapted to the screen by Gladys Lehman, costarring Joan Blondell and Melvyn Douglas, with Mary Astor, Frances Drake, Jerome Cowan, Robert Paige, Thurston Hall, Pierre Watkin, Walter Kingsford and Lester Matthews. Directed by Alexander Hall. Reviewed Friday afternoon by Mary Harris. At the Earle Theater.

Columbia has rolled itself a honey in "There's Always a Woman." It puts the customers in stitches. It's nutty as a flock if larks, but you know—never a dull moment in the nut-house!

It's a terrible temptation to quote wisecracks by the dozen in reviewing this picture. But these two got a lot of roars from the masculine clients:

1. When Melvyn Douglas consents to take wife Joan Blondell to a fancy night club, he conditions, "Understand, you're to take one drink and the regular dinner. No a la carte stuff."

2. After this promise has been busted to flinders and when Melvyn and Joan are hung in the hangovers, she asks him if he really loves her. Says Melvyn, "Yeah, but don't ask me in the morning."

Gladys Lehman did the screen play and Wilson Collison the story. This precious pair, between them, rate credit for some of the fastest lines and funniest situations in motion picture history in 1938.

The plot is a feather-light affair about a husband and wife who are rival detectives and the action whirls about a couple of more or less frivolous murders, with interludes of third degreeing in the hilarious manner and the best binge of the year.

What Audiences Love.

But the unique quality of the show centers in the provoking tricks of wife Joan and the way it stews up the Irish of husband Melvyn. There isn't any actual violence, except that Joan gets her fingers slapped when she reaches for her husband's drinks, but the atmosphere of fuss-fight-kiss-and-make-up is just what motion picture audiences crave, especially when it's laced with a good detective yarn. It made the folks at the Earle yesterday as happy as a bunch of kittens with their first mess of catnip.

Melvyn Douglas and Joan Blondell, in the order named, will add immeasurably to their popularity through "There's Always a Woman." The differentiation is due to the fact that Douglas is a much better actor than the charming Blondell is an actress. They both have equally "fat" parts, but it is the acid Douglas touch that puts over the partnership. Aside to the girls: Blondell's hair-dos will give you a swell idea of what not to do with your locks. The day-time effect is too Zuluish and the evening a sad comment on the so-called gay nineties.

Can you imagine Mary Astor as a murderess? Impossible. But she is the most soignee of husband and lover killers. And without benefit of a diary! Frances Drake has the role of husband-snatcher, also seemingly incompatible with her frank and lovely eyes, but these matrimonial pirates are like that. Jerome Cowan plays a gambler, but is more effective as a corpse.

"There's Always a Woman" is destined to be an odds-on favorite at any man's boxoffice. It sizzles with love, fun and fighting, humanity's principal pleasures.

Another Can-Can.

It's April by the calendar, but August by the Earle stage show, and a sizzling spell at that. Felovis, ace of magicians, imposed a sort of magic in his tossing of flaming torches—and that can-can of the chorus, la! la! oui! oui! Likewise: Avec,—but stop. Still and all, disclaiming tendencies to narrow-mindedness, this critic thinks that the last part of the can-can routine needs tuning down. The can-can, naughty in its basic appeal, is still a dance of enticement and not exhibi... Why put on the slow ... of modernism after the ... s of the original Parisi... n?

Palace

The conflagration may be the climax but what goes before is high-spirited, interesting, exciting and entertaining.

The O'Learys may not be real as far as history is concerned, but they are real enough as picture of people living in a gusty, bawdy town and time. And they are well-played, with Alice Brady way out ahead of the parade in a really fine performance—no flutterings or vapors here, just good, honest playing that is heart-warming to see.

We liked the Dion of young Tyrone Power exceedingly—ingratiating grin, concienceless manners and all—a nicely drawn, and incidentally very handsome portrait of politician. (A little on the young side, though.) The Don Ameche performance, on the other hand, lacks a certain necessary note of sincerity. His crusading goodness too often grows sanctimonious in voice and expression.

Alice Faye, miscast as Belle, struggles in a womanly way to overcome that handicap, and succeeds in part, but a husky voice is not enough to transfer her from the ingenue class to the "what a woman" classification from which Belle should have been drawn. Tom Brown, and Brian Donlevy add merit to the picture and credits to their own scores.

The story, as you must know by now and as the title indicates, is the story of that wild, blooming, anything-goes town, the old Chicago, which lived before the fire and which survived, at least in part, in the new city that rose on the old town's ashes. D. J. L.

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

Ovation Given Singer; Film Will Recall Old Formula.

"THE BATTLE OF BROADWAY," Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of a story by Norman Houston, adapted to the screen by Lou Breslow and John Patrick, featuring Victor McLaglen, Brian Donlevy and Louise Hovick, with Raymond Walburn, Lynn Bari, Jane Darwell, Robert Kellard, Sammy Cohen, Esther Muir, Eddie Holden, Hattie McDaniel, Paul Irving, Frank Moran and Andrew Tombes. Directed by George Marshall. Reviewed Friday afternoon. At Loew's Capitol Theater.

There seems to have been no exaggeration of the sensational success being achieved by Allan Jones on his Eastern tour of personal appearances. His triumph at Loew's Capitol Theater yesterday was overwhelming. One is almost tempted to use that hackneyed Hollywood word "terrific."

BELL.

The ovation accorded Mr. Jones was completely justified by the excellence of his contribution to the program. Informality seemed to dominate the Jones interval on the stage. At the reviewed performance, he appeared in a gray business suit, seemed not quite so tall and a little more stocky than his images would suggest, and sang magnificently.

It is a happy selection of songs that this talented artist has made for his Washington appearance. There is an opening medley, for example, in which he incorporates that seemingly imperishable gem, "A Pretty Girl Is Like a Melody," and there come along an extended succession of other favorites, including "Always and Always," which Joan Crawford sang in "Mannequin;" "Make Believe," the song that gave Mr. Jones his first "break" in pictures, in "Show Boat;" "The Donkey Serenade," from "The Firefly," and many more.

Sings Many Encores.

Genial, gracious and generous, Allan Jones followed in the footsteps of Lawrence Tibbett, Nelson Eddy, John Charles Thomas and other prime vocalists who have appeared here from time to time in concert, by singing encore after encore. It might be suggested that he could save himself tremendous wear and tear on the physical and nervous system by staying on stage throughout the length of his act, instead of making an exit after each number. All that running up and down must have an exhausting effect.

And then there is the matter of the microphone. Mr. Jones is a singer of such robust voice as to need little or no amplification. I noticed yesterday afternoon that he was never closer to the public address gadget than three or four feet. If he can sing effectively—and he can—from that distance, there seems to be no reason to have the thing there at all.

Beyond the matter of vocalization, Mr. Jones is an ingratiating performer who makes an immediately pleasant impression upon his audience—just as he always has done from the screen. No one on a local stage ever has been more enthusiastically received and no one ever has deserved that cordial and friendly reception more.

Old Formula Revived.

There is a picture at the Capitol this week, too. It is an item known by the name of "The Battle of Broadway" and is a palpable attempt on the part of Twentieth Century-Fox to rehabilitate public interest in the sort of thing that Victor McLaglen and Edmund Lowe used to do together—beginning, if I remember correctly, with "What Price Glory?" In the place of Eddie Lowe, Brian Donlevy now assumes the role of chief sparring partner for the Gargantuan Mr. McLaglen. And in the place of Fifi D'Orsay, Louise Hovick comes along as the gal in the case. By a strange coincidence—if that is what it was—Miss Hovick, in the film, is a Miss Lee. Miss Hovick also was a Miss Lee in the burlesque and "Follies" days preceding her emergence in the films. "Gypsy Rose" was the name, if you remember.

But to get back to "The Battle of Broadway," the film is another of those rough-and-tumble creations dedicated to brawn and belligerency with a Legionnaire convention in New York as background. Mr. McLaglen and Mr. Donlevy are working in the steel mills of Homer C. ..., who was a buck private under their top sergeancies in the War. Miss Hovick, for the fi... ever have seen her on the ... that she should be. The gi... to be coming along. In the ...hall-type paragraph preceding these comments will be found the names of the others who contribute to the violent humor of this release.

From the introductory passages of these remarks it should not be construed that Allan Jones is the only one on the stage portion of the bill. There also are those sturdy veterans, Yorke and King, sharing headline distinction; Novak and Fay, "Hollywood's best-dressed lunatics," and Bob Robinson and Virginia Martin, in comedy songs and dances. They all add to the luster of a pretty elegant bit of pastiming.

There is no need, either, to overlook the orchestral overture or the Fox Movietone News as helpful auxiliaries of an unimportant but enjoyable two or three hours of agreeable relaxation.

Perfect Figure.

In New Columbia Comedy at the Earle

MELVYN DOUGLAS AND JOAN BLONDELL as they appear in "There's Always a Woman," major feature of the current screen bill at the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater. This feature combines with the stage bill to form one of the most attractive programs of the spring in Washington. Many clever farceurs appears in associate roles with these competent and popular costars. Columbia seems to have turned out another hit.

In Hollywood

With HEDDA HOPPER

Hollywood, Calif., April 22.—Since "Test Pilot" has hit the bull's-eye, Metro has planned all sorts of all-star groups and goings-on. They did that successfully a few years ago in "Grand Hotel." It wasn't so hot in "Dinner at Eight." Some of the stars didn't suit the roles. But if stories were written to order and tailor-made to suit the personalities of their players, they should be a howling success. I'm sitting back on my haunches waiting for the outcome.

HEDDA HOPPER.

Going into a picture for fall release, you'll have the thrill of seeing Myrna Loy, Joan Crawford, Luise Rainer, Clark Gable, Spencer Tracy, Bob Taylor and Bob Montgomery on the same screen at the same time. Which should be something for us—but maybe a headache for them.

At this moment they're trying to put Jeanette MacDonald, Luise Rainer and Fernand Gravet in "The Great Waltz." And for "Maiden Voyage" you'll be treated to Bob Montgomery and Luise Rainer. Am I full of Metro this morning!

Bear with me while I tell you that Greta Garbo will play Mme. Curie instead of Luise Rainer. Before tackling that, Greta will do a comedy, playing a Russian woman of the people who is sent to Paris for the good of her country and there meets up with a Frenchman and comes to life with a bang. After the fun she's been having in Italy, this picture should be duck soup for Greta.

I wish to congratulate that same studio for making Freddie Wilcox, brother-in-law of Nick Schenck, a director. Freddie is a clever boy and has worked hard.

I'd like to see them give an important picture to Harry Bucquet, who has been faithful to them for 14 years. He directed and collaborated on the two-reeler, "Torture Money," which got the Academy award. In fact, he's directed six of the "Crime Doesn't Pay" series. Which they're hoping will take the place of "B" pictures.

He did all the Chic Sale shorts and handled the second unit on "Conquest." Harry has earned a real break.

Also Charlie Dorian, who has been made a director but given no assignment to date.

Easter came and went like a roaring lion—and Fourth of July weather. I communed with Nature for an hour, climbing my favorite hill. It took another hour to get the purple hue out of my face so I could go on to Adrian's breakfast.

Everybody was there, including Thomas Mann, the great writer. He was so busy talking German with Herr Lanyi, the Hungarian sculptor who's been turning our stars into stone, that I didn't have the heart to barge in and juggle an introduction. What right had I to try to find out in 20 minutes what it's taken him a lifetime to learn? But I'm going to read his latest book—borrowed it yesterday.

Margaret Sullivan and hubby Leland Hayward left early. It was moving day for them—into a rambling house they have remodeled in Brentwood.

One of the nicest there was Rosa Ponselle, dressed so appropriately—a flowered cotton print, gathered all the way around the waist on a plain band, and a blue shirtwaist coming out of that. She left early, too, with hubby Carle Jackson, whose father is Mayor of Baltimore. Carle went to play polo. With his long sideburns, he could easily be a candidate for Rhett Butler, but he's satisfied with a prima donna, horses and his real estate business.

Trans-Lux

When a newsreel show abounds with such a variety of worth-while shots as the show at the Trans-Lux Theater does this week, it is difficult to enumerate the outstanding items. Of course, when we have our old friend Charlie McCarthy cavorting with his protege Edgar Bergen, that tops the works. McCarthy is a scream, as usual, in "real" reel, entitled, "Free and Easy."

The 35 minutes of news events, covered by all newsreels, is unusually diversified. Scenes of the United States Navy Pacific fleet battling storms off Hawaii are contrasted with the showing of the United States Army's new autogyros. And for real contrast we have that funster of all funsters, Lew Lehr, doing his stuff with the lady fire-eater. In the news also we have President Roosevelt making his latest fireside chat while the new French premier takes over the government. Gen. Pershing is welcomed at New York, as he arrives from his severe illness to attend his son's wedding, and the baseball games covered include the Red-Sox and Yankees, Chicago and Detroit, Giants and Boston Bees but, top of all, the opening game at Washington with Philadelphia and the President pitching the opening ball.

Many other sports events are included taking in the Scotland-England soccer classic in England.

The cartoon for the week is "The Old Mill," another of those Disney wonders in color. There is also a short entitled "Unusual Hunting" that reveals the method of capturing baby falcons for the famous royal sport of falconry.

Nassau in the Bahamas takes you to those enchanted isles and truly lifts the vista of southern waters to northern eyes.

Columbia

"The Girl of the Golden West" renewed its downtown poularity at Loew's Columbia Theater yesterday, with Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy in the costellar roles of Ramerez, the bandit, and the vocal young woman who ran the Polka saloon.

It is an elaborated and musicalized version of the old Belasco stage success that is revealed here. One wonders a bit that so turgid a melodrama should have been converted into an operetta, but there it is. The music is appropriate and tuneful and many of the scenes take on the proportions almost of pageantry, but, through some strange quirk, the former fire and thrill of the original piece seems to have been lost.

There remains one authentic characterization that will not offend those who remember the late Frank Keenan's performance in the same role on the stage and that is the portrayal of the sheriff, Jack Rance, by Walter Pidgeon. Mr. Pidgeon does rather a handsome job, with that blood spattering on his hand, the poker game with the gal and all.

There are many others in the cast who contribute to the interest and the suspense—such as it is—of this subject, but Mis MacDonald, Mr. Eddy and Mr. Pidgeon are the ones who carry it along.

The new bill at the Columbia is augmented by short subjects and a new release of the "News of the Day," depicting the happenings of last week that happened to appeal to the eye of the cameraman. "The Lone Ranger" still will continue to stand your hair on end, if you are an addict of the "chapter play" and a believer in the superhuman heroics of a superman.

Lively Comedy Enters Second Hilarious Week

'The Joy of Living' Is Tuneful Frivolity at Keith's.

"Joy of Living" is an easy-going little romantic comedy which shows what happens when a hard-working gal decides to have fun. True, it does lag a trifle before it sheds its scruples and lets down its hair, but it is not tiresome even in its initial movements.

Irene Dunne, who can tear off the most elegant drunk scenes of any lady now flickering before the movie public, is a popular singer who has a parasitical family who do not appreciate her.

Douglas Fairbanks, jr., does appreciate her, and thus she tosses her singing contract, which is also her family's meal ticket, to the winds, and embarks on a career of doing what she wants to do, when she wants to do it.

Alice Brady, Guy Kibbee, Lucille Ball and a set of horrible little twins are the family, and beautiful specimens are they. Billy Gilbert has a good spot as a cafe proprietor and Eric Blore, butler, and Walter Hymer, chauffeur, round out the supporting cast, which is about as good a bunch of sub-satellites as could be found.

Jerome Kern songs, as served up by Miss Dunne are very tasty indeed, such as "You Couldn't Be Cuter," which drools from your radio and mine, along with several other singable and sung-to-death ballads.

In the newsreel, the Yanks lose to the Sox and driverless cars scuttle over Italy's militarized roads. Donald Duck, an overgrown dog and Mickey Mouse trip gaily through a Disney short about how not to build a boat.

Best of the subsidiaries, almost worthy of being written about first, is the "March of Time," containing two very pertinent subjects, dealing with them in able terms. First is "Crime and Prisons," ably subtitled and full of provocative pictures. Second is "Nazi Conquest No. 2," about Hitler and Austria, containing newspictures which must have been made under difficult conditions. They are shots of Hitler's entry into Austria. Taking the text of "Mein Kampf," the pictorial journalism of the "March of Time" shows how all his prophecies, inspired or not, are being made to come true.

Metropolitan

"Jezebel" is making quite a name for itself. This Warner Brothers picturization of a story of the Deep South that has been popularly supposed to represent their advance negation of the box-office potency of "Gone With the Wind," yesterday began the second week of its repeat engagement on the screen at the Metropolitan Theater and its third in the Capital's mid-city area. This may not be a record, but it is, at least, memorable.

The story of "Jezebel" is not a happy one. It is, however, as has been recited here before, a dramatically powerful one. Its characters are, for the most part, unpleasant people, who take especial pains to see to it that they engage themselves in unfortunate situations, involving personal recriminations, vicious spites and personal encounters, even leading to death on the duelling field. These considerations seem to be a hindrance to the triumph of the film as a particularly well-acted and well-wrought example of what a motion picture might best be.

In the title role—or that by inference and implication—Bette Davis does one of the most impressive pieces of work she has contributed to the screen, and she has been an Academy award winner. In her support are such completely competent people as Henry Fonda, George Brent, Margaret Lindsay, Fay Bainter, Donald Crisp, Richard Cromwell and a great many more.

The narrative concerns personal animosities, with a climax in the yellow fever plague that overcame New Orleans in ante-bellum days. There are no more than a vagrant gay note or two in the entire action of the film. But it is a gripping and compelling exposition of certain aspects of living, even so, and deserves the encomiums that have been bestowed upon it for the artistic fidelity with which it has been executed:

The entire bill, short subjects and all, of course, continues with the major feature at the Metropolitan. The newsreel, needless to say, has been refreshed by newer news shots than were there last week.

Miss Sidney Swaps Names With a Poet

Carl Sandburg confessed that he felt a little silly.

Here he was, a noted American poet, white-haired, gaunt and 60 years old, asking a slip of a girl if he could please have her autograph!

It happened on the "You and Me" set, in Hollywood, when Sandburg met Screen Actress Sylvia Sidney.

"Autograph hunters may be pests," he conceded, presenting the lady with a pen and a little autograph book, "but if you don't sign your name right here my children will never forgive me."

So Miss Sidney obliged by signing her name, and countered by asking the poet to sign his own name on her script. He did—and everybody was happy.

The Post's New Yorker

By LEONARD LYONS

New York, April 22.

GEORGE VI: Arrangements are being made for Mae West to appear in British theaters next month. She will receive one of the highest salaries ever paid to an actress in your empire . . . Chiang Kai-shek's Dr. Roy Ikagi, who supervises the Japanese propaganda in America, will return to his native country within the next week. His publicists have been ordered to do no more work—until he returns.

• • • •

WILL HAYS: The deer-sequences in "Snow White" proved so popular that after Walt Disney completes "Pinnochio" his follow-up picture will be "Bambi"—the story of a deer . . . F. D. R.: Your son, Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., arrived here—to make a legal determination as to whether his voting residence shall be New York or Virginia . . Joe DiMaggio: So you were signed by the Yanks, eh? Well, next Sunday's supplement of a local tabloid will include a regularly scheduled cigarette ad showing a photo of you signing a Yankee contract. The ad was placed weeks in advance.

• • • •

A. B. C. BOARD: The Columbia Broadcasting System has banned the mention of "Manhattan Cocktail" over its air-waves . . . Schiaparelli: Elizabeth Hawes, who has been exciting much controbersy with her fashions-debunking book, "Fashion Is Spinach," has joined the staff of the Connecticut Nutmeg. She'll write a column about fashions.

• • • •

COL. JAY C. FLIPPEN: The mother of Deems Taylor attended his most recent broadcast . . . After it was completed she made no comment—except: "Son, I want to say 2 things to you—your handkerchief is showing and you're losing your hair." . . . "Ma," replied Deems, "I'll fix the handkerchief, right away."

• • • •

CORDELL HULL: When George E. Powers, of the International Workers Order, told Judge Walton E. Moore, counselor of state, that Green H. Hackworth and James Dunn should be dismissed because of pro-France sympathies, Moore coughed a warning, but Powers didn't get-hep. Those two men who flanked Judge Moore during the interview were Messrs. Hackworth and Dunn . . . Gov. Lehman: The American Labor Party is becoming too suspicious of the proposals to organize a State department of justice. They'll oppose it . . . Gov. Horner: Dr. Herman Bundesen, who heads Chicago's Health Commission, tells his friends that the rumba—from a sound, physiological viewpoint—is good exercise.

• • • •

EMPEROR HIROHITO: Fred White is associated with the Sutton News Agency—an organization which does publicity for your country . . . Friday evening Mr. White was in need of gayety. And so this publicist for Japan went to the Paradise escorting Momi Kai, the Hotel Lexington dancer—who is Chinese!

• • • •

H. G. WELLS: Ten days ago a secret meeting was held in London, attended by 40 British publishers, Lords, Members of Parliament and educators. They congregated to discuss the political significance of Quincy Howe's book, "England Expects Every American to Do His Duty"—for whose new British edition you've written the introduction . . . Princeton University: Prof. Albert Einstein will vacation this summer in Long Island—sailing a boat.

• • • •

LILY PONS: The newspapers devoted much space to reporting that you gave a concert on the Normandie and sang all during the violent storm at sea. Your copassengers, who just returned here, insist that you didn't give the concert—that you were locked in your room at the time.

• • • •

EMILY POST: Tallulah Bankhead and Mrs. Patrick Campbell lunched at Voison's, where the room was decorated with cages containing live birds. Just before the dessert was ordered Mrs. Campbell summoned the head waiter. "Anything else, Madam?" he asked. "Yes," replied Mrs. Campbell, pointing authoritatively. "Release those birds." . . . Newspaper Guild: No matter what happens, H. L. Mencken plans not to renew his three-month editorial assignment with the Baltimore Sun. He'll quit next month to complete his new book, which will be called "Economic & Social Treatise on the United States."

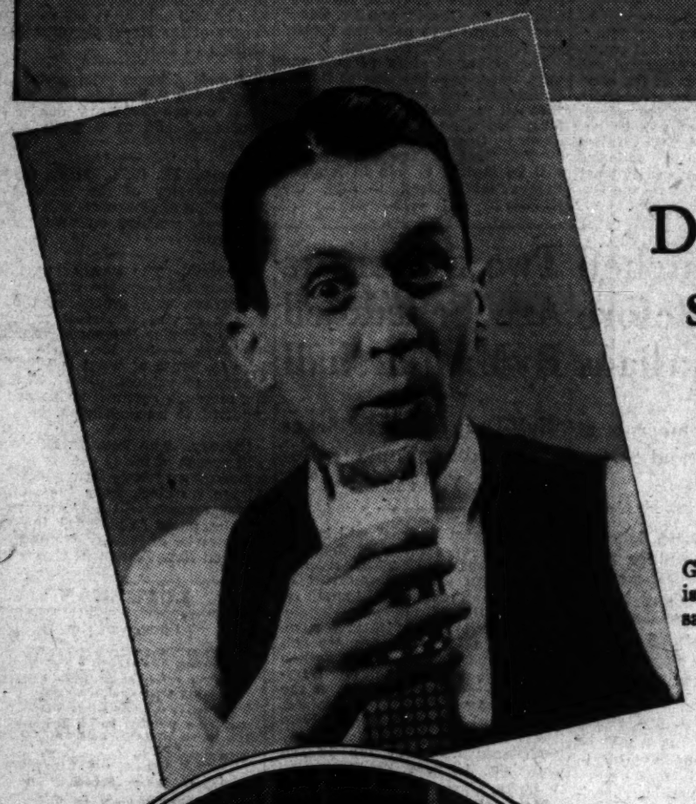
Some call it a Business Miracle! We know it's just "Better Beer"



During the recent "business recession", the sale of Gunther's Beer has shown the greatest increase since the first year of repeal!

That Gunther is selling many millions of bottles more beer is due entirely, we believe; to the fact that beer drinkers, by the thousands, have learned about its dry, beer-y flavor!

Every day more and more people are joining the swing to Gunther's dry, beer-y flavor!

Many party hostesses prefer serving dry, beer-y Gunther's... it doesn't "fill you up" quickly like sweeter, heavier type brews!

Former Pastor To Speak at Luther Place

Dr. Diffenderfer to Return for 65th Anniversary Celebration.

Dr. Carl C. Rasmussen, pastor at Luther Place Memorial Church, announces that as a part of the sixty-fifth celebration of the founding of the church. Dr. George M. Diffenderfer, former pastor, will speak on "Fruit Bearers in the Lord's Vineyard at the 11 o'clock service tomorrow morning. Dr. Charles Butler, son of the founder and first pastor of the church, will assist in the service. The choir will sing "Lift Up Your Heads" from "The Messiah," by Handel, and the quartet will sing "Easter Carol," by Rush-Dels.

Reformation. "The Sequel of the Tale" is the subject chosen by the Rev. Ralph W. Loew, assistant pastor, for his sermon at the 8:30 matin service tomorrow. At 11 a. m. Mr. Loew will speak on "Bringing Eternity Into the Present," and at 8 p. m. on "The Tragedy of the Little Foxes."

St. Mark's. The Rev. J. Luther Frantz will deliver tomorrow morning a sermon on "Three Gardens." Miss Janice Meeks will lead the Young People's discussion at 6:30 p. m. on the topic, "When Is Education Christian?"

Concordia. The Rev. Charles Enders will begin a series of sermons on the third article of the Apostles' Creed tomorrow in both the German and English services, at 10 and 11 a. m. respectively, with his specific topic, "The Holy Spirit." At 8 p. m. the annual congregational meeting will be held.

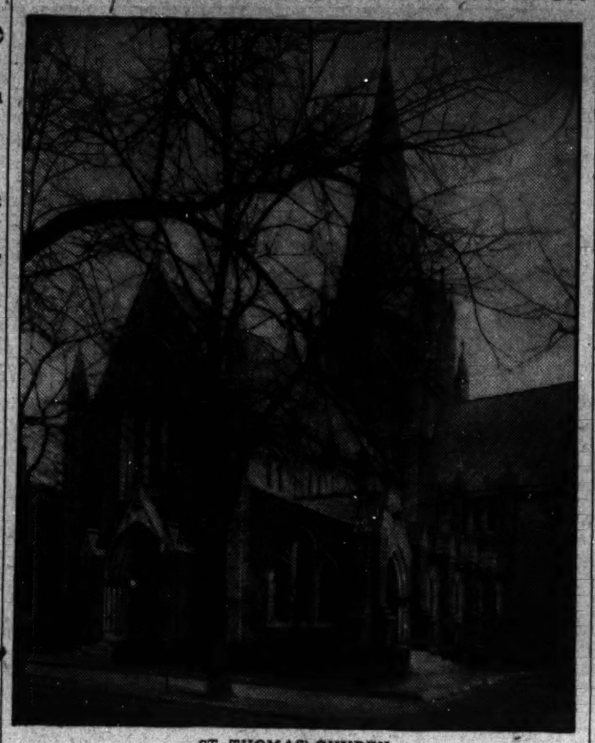
St. Thomas' to Gain Its Fame As Second Roosevelt's Church



ST. THOMAS' CHURCH.

Many Other Distinguished Men, Though, Have Served It, Including Ambassador Walter Edge and Secretary Ogden L. Mills.

St. Thomas' Episcopal Church, on Church street near Dupont Circle, has several claims on history but probably will be known to future generations as the church in which the second President Roosevelt worshiped. The President and his family first became members of the parish when he served as Assistant Secretary of the Navy under President Wilson, and for a time he acted as vestryman.

Among other distinguished men who have attended St. Thomas' as members of the parish and as vestrymen, during the church's 44 years of existence, are Admirals A. T. Mahan, George C. Remey and B. F. Hutchison; Generals John M. Wilson and Clarence R. Edwards; Ambassadors W. W. Rockhill, George T. Marye and Walter E. Edge, and Secretary of the Treasury Ogden L. Mills.

At present the senior vestryman is Theodore W. Noyes, publisher of the Evening Star. Chief Justice Alfred A. Wheat of the District Court serves as senior warden and Lieut. Comdr. Needham L. Jones, U. S. N., retired, as junior warden.

St. Thomas' was organized in 1891 as Calvary Parish. Two years later the name was changed and construction of the present building started. The church opened for its first service in 1899. Additions since that time include the rectory, built in 1915, and the parish hall, dedicated in 1923.

The furnishings of the church are in keeping with its beautiful Gothic exterior. Behind the screen of quartered oak which faces the memorial doors is an angle font, sculptured for St. Thomas' in Italy and copied from the famous Thorwaldsen font in Copenhagen Cathedral. Depicted on the 36 stained-glass windows is the story of the Anglican Church, from its founding by Joseph of Arimathea.

Dr. Miller Takes 'He Ascended' As His Subject

Dr. Raphael Harwood Miller, in a post-Easter message tomorrow, will preach in the morning on "He Ascended Into Heaven," at National City Christian Church. In the evening he will discuss "Has the Church of Christ the Answer?"

Columbia Heights. "Defeatism or Victory?" will be the topic for the morning sermon of the Rev. A. P. Wilson tomorrow. In the evening his topic will be "What Happened After Easter." The board of elders will meet Monday evening.

Ninth Street. The Rev. Clifford H. Hope, pastor, will preach tomorrow morning on "What Jesus Teaches About Hell." The sermon at the 7:45 p. m. service will be preached by Mr. V. C. Carpenter, who, with his wife, has been in Puerto Rico as a missionary over 30 years.

Third. The Rev. C. N. Williams, minister, will preach on "What Shall We Do About the Resurrection?" at the 11 a. m. worship and Lord's Supper service tomorrow.

Fifteenth Street. The Rev. V. C. Carpenter and the Rev. William LaRoche will be guest speakers at 11 a. m. and 8 p. m. services tomorrow, respectively.

The speaker for the all religious service, Andrew Rankin Memorial Chapel, Howard University, tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock will be Mordecai Wyatt Johnson's S. T. M., D. D., president of the university.

Mr. William Moody Talks Wednesday At Rock Creek

The Rev. William R. Moody, rector St. Mark's Church of Washington and chairman of the Diocesan Department of Religious Education, will be guest speaker at the general teachers and officers meeting of the church school Wednesday evening in St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Rock Creek Parish House.

Mr. Moody is in charge of the diocesan summer school in religion at Overall, Va. Subjects offered there are a part of the four-year scheme for leadership education set forth by the Diocese of Washington, this being the fourth year under this scheme.

Those successfully completing a subject will be given full diocesan credit toward the diploma in religious education set forth by the diocese.

Mr. Moody will give a complete description of the activities at the Shenandoah Conference with his sound movie of recently taken pictures. At this meeting, too, will be transacted general matters to be worked out during the remainder of the school year.

Canon E. H. Jones To Give Sermon At the Cathedral

The Rev. Everett H. Jones, canon and chancellor of the Cathedral, will deliver the sermon at the celebration of the Holy Communion at 11 a. m. tomorrow when the Easter Sunday music will be repeated by the Cathedral choir. Holy Communion will be celebrated at 7:30 a. m. and 9:30 a. m. in the Bethlehem Chapel of the Cathedral crypt.

Under the "Union of States" plan, public officials and people of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts will be remembered in prayer at the Cathedral altar tomorrow. The Massachusetts State flag, presented in memory of the late Senator Henry Cabot Lodge and Mrs. Lodge, will be carried in procession at the 11 a. m. service, when people from that State now residing in the District of Columbia will be especially welcomed.

Pilgrimages for out of town worshipers will be held immediately following 11 a. m. and 4 p. m. services.

Christian Science Theme 'Probation'

"Probation After Dark" is the subject of the lesson-sermon in all the Churches of Christ, Scientist, tomorrow. The Golden Text is from John 5:25: "Verily, verily, I say unto you, the hour is coming, and now is, when the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God: and they that hear shall live."

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "And I looked, and, lo, a Lamb stood on the Mount Zion, and with him 140,000, having his Father's name written in their foreheads." (Revelation 14:1.)

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science Textbook, "Science and Health With Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "The sinless joy—the perfect harmony and immortality of life, possessing unlimited divine beauty and goodness without a single bodily pleasure or pain—constitutes the only veritable, indestructible man, whose being is spiritual." Local Protestants to Take Part In Unity Observance Tomorrow

Dr. William Adams Brown to Speak in Service at Cathedral as the Revs. Harris, Mays, Abernethy, McCartney Participate.

Local delegates to the world conferences at Oxford and Edinburgh last summer and all Protestant ministers in the Nation's Capital have been invited to participate in the Christian unity service to be held in Washington Cathedral tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock. The service is planned as a demonstration of the essential unity of faith and purpose which marks many of the religious bodies.

The Rev. Dr. William Adams Brown, of Union Theological Seminary in New York city, chairman of the Universal Council of Life and Work, and an honorary canon of Washington Cathedral, will deliver the sermon on "The Rediscovery of the Church."

He will be introduced by the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, D. D., bishop of Washington, who has extended an invitation through the Washington Federation of Churches to members of local congregations to be present.

Approximately 3,000 seats will be available without cards of admission, and the new acoustical equipment installed in the cathedral will cary the spoken words of the service to all portions of the great choir, crossing and north transept.

The order of service will be one never before used in the United States, being based on that followed at St. Paul's Cathedral last summer for the service attended by the Oxford and Edinburgh delegates.

Among local clergy who will take part in the service are the Rev. Frederick Brown Harris, pastor of Foundry Methodist Episcopal Church, and the Rev. Benjamin E. Mays, dean of the school of religion at Howard University — both of whom were delegates to the Oxford conference; the Rev. William S. Abernethy, pastor of Calvary Baptist Church, and the Rev. Albert Joseph McCartney, pastor of the Covenant-First Presbyterian Church and chairman of the committee on religious life in the Nation's Capital.

The several "acts" of invocation, penitence, intercession and adoration will be taken in turn by the Rev. Carl C. Rasmussen, pastor of Luther Place Memorial Church; the Rev. Horace E. Cromer, pastor of Emory Methodist Episcopal Church South and president of the Washington Federation of Churches; the Rev. Russell James Clinchy, pastor of the Mount Pleasant Congregational Church, and the Rev. Henry R. Ranck, pastor of Grace Reformed Church. Dr. Clinchy and Dr. Ranck were delegates to both the Oxford and Edinburgh conferences.

The cathedral choir of men and boys, under the direction of Robert G. Barrow, will render the anthem "Let All the World in Ev'ry Corner Sing, My God and King," with words by George Herbert and music by Eric Thiman. The congregation will be invited to join in familiar hymns interspersed through the service.

Bishop Mitchell To Talk Before Episcopalians

Will Preach Tomorrow at St. Thomas' and St. John's

The Right Rev. Walter Mitchell, Bishop of Arizona, will be guest preacher at two Episcopal churches here tomorrow, speaking at St. Thomas' at 11 o'clock in the morning, and at St. Johns' at 8 p. m.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Heart and Health Broken by Sister's Untimely Death, Woman Blames Doctors' Greed, Indifference.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My parents died when I was very young. I worked my way through business school and got a stenographic position. I had sisters and a brother. I worried about all of them, but particularly about the youngest who was ill. I undertook her care and support. She became very ill. I called a doctor. He insisted upon hospitalization. She worried, and I worried about the bills. How big they looked to us—$6 a day for the hospital room and $5 a day for the doctor! And now aloof from poverty and trouble seemed the doctor, with his good clothes and big car.

* * * *

He would walk into my little sister's room, listen to her generous, loving heart beating so rapidly because of all our trouble, say "Cheerio" to her and go away to mark down another $5 to be collected from her or from myself. I took her out of the hospital to a rooming house, nursed her myself and she got well. But next year she was ill again. The doctor again. More bills. This went on for several years. There were other doctors and a nurse—oh, a terrible nurse. I quarreled with the doctor, became impatient at times with my little sister, and then—she died.

* * * *

Since then (that was six years ago) I have suffered constant mental anguish. With nothing organically wrong with me, I am an invalid. The burden of my grief seems to be that if I had been more devoted to my sister she need not have died. Her malady—rheumatic heart disease—was not necessarily fatal. My feeling toward the medical profession is one of bitterness and distrut. Because of their greed for wealth and indifference to the sufferings of the poor, my sister died and my heart broke. Surely, there must be a better way of taking care of persons in low-income groups when they are ill. This is my story; I doubt that you can help me; but it may help someone else.

ANONYMOUS.

* * * *

Victim of Neurosis.

DEAR ANONYMOUS: Though your sister died of a material minded world's cruel indifference to the "sufferings of the poor," as much as from her organic malady of rheumatic heart disease, that does not justify your soul sickness today. The world's vast population would be invalided in very short order indeed, if every person who had lost a loved one after waging a gallant though losing fight against unfair odds to prolong that loved one's life, were to take to his bed in bitterness, remorse and defeat.

* * * *

Having done every practical thing within your power to save your sister, it is sheer neurosis to blame yourself now for having been cross on occasion. Remember that even saints have given way to moments of sheer vexation. Almost anybody can meet a transitory crisis with supernal calm and patience; but human nerves and human nature are not so constituted that they can stand day in, day out, year in, year out, the agonizing strain of fear, anxiety, worry and overwork.

* * * *

It was not you who spoke sharply to your sister; not you who failed of tenderest, most unfailing devotion; it was the life force within you crying out frantically that it had temporarily reached the end of its resources. The person who plumbs the depths of nervous and physical exhaustion is as drugged by fatigue as the inebriate is drugged with alcohol, and is no more responsible for his emotional reflexes. Indeed, psychologists tell us that chronic fatigue and chronic alcoholism have much the same effect on personality. Each demoralizes one's rational powers.

* * * *

What you are suffering from today is nervous debility, induced by your heroically generous sacrifice of health (the greatest gift you had to give), spent on behalf of your sister. This debility is manifesting itself in the form of neurosis, in an obsessive conviction that you might have done more than you did. You might just as well damn yourself for not having been born a superman; for not having been congenitally endowed with omniscience and omnipotence. Judged by nature's immutable laws, you are less guilty of withholding than you are guilty of overreaching yourself.

* * * *

It is possible, too, that in your ardently selfless young devotion to your sister, you developed an emotional fixation upon her that was in itself contrary to nature. During those years when you should have been establishing more self-expressive social ties, when you should have been finding your mate, setting up a home, and having children of your own to love and care for, you found it necessary to become a mother to your little sister, and you may have fixed upon her, without realizing it, as the be-all and end-all of your whole existence, so that when she died, life's claim upon you seemed to die with her. Mothers of only children sometimes fall into this mistake; so, too, do spinster daughters and bachelor sons, who foolishly profess to find no justification for existence after death takes a parent whose last years bespoke a necessity for devotional care that insidiously maneuvered their whole emotional nature out of focus.

* * * *

The remedy for your current invalidism consists in casting out your neurosis, root, stock and branch; possibly through the medium of psychoanalysis (such as you may procure free of charge through the Washington Life Adjustment Center); in availing yourself of the nerve-healing and body-healing which is to be found in spending much time out of nerves-; and in readdressing miraculous restoratives for tired nerves); and in re-addressing yourself, honestly and courageously, to the business of living through finding some cause to work for.

* * * *

What better cause can you find than the cause of "the low-income groups," who suffer unnecessarily and die from neglect, because the world's attention has not been sufficiently attracted to their plight? Many a man and woman has passed through the fire of some experience quite as tragic as yours and turned it to such humanitarian account that the world has erected grateful memorials to his (or her) life work. Get into the thick of things and fight for the rectification of such bitter injustices as you believe were partially responsible for your sister's untimely end. Dedicate yourself to the purpose of seeing that she has not died—nor you suffered—in vain. M. H.

Jacket Costumes in Spring Scene

By Ethel Ehlen.

The Post Fashion Editor.

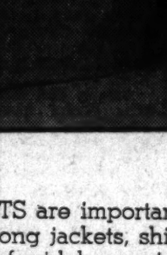
JACKETS are important items in the spring and summer fashion picture—long jackets, shirt versions, fitted and boxy affairs. They are also made of widely varying materials to suit all occasions. The spectator sports interpretation, at left, is made of plaid wool in navy, white, red and bright blue; skirt, bag, gloves and hat are navy. A smart and practical outfit for business. For more formal wear, the dark sheer jacketed-dress (right), with lingerie blouse, high-waistline skirt and boxy tuxedo jacket. Note sleeve and jacket lengths. An ageless costume which lends itself to numerous accessory changes.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, April 22.

IT'S HARD TO BELIEVE, but within ten days most of our roof-top places of evening fun will be open for the summer season. New Yorkers in gala mood and caught in town in the hot months go to the roofs for their jollity, for if there's any breeze going in the stone wilderness of Manhattan, it will be found on the summits of our big hotels.



ALICE HUGHES

And they are charming places, too, with the finest of dance music for those who defy the heat. On May 5, for instance, the Hotel Pierre roof will open, and that's 40 floors above Fifth avenue. Emil Coleman's soothing orchestra will perform, and my favorite Castilian dance team, Medrano and Donna, will represent Terpsichore. I saw them first at the Miami Biltmore a few winters back, and now I'm one of their regular fans.

Mr. Vincent Astor's St. Regis roof will open the portals the following evening, with Joseph Rines and his elegant band playing the tunes. Mr. Astor's spot will even sport a ballet this summer. This establishment was called "The Viennese Roof" last year, but I imagine it will be renamed.

Of course, Mr. Rockfeller's gorgeous Rainbow Room will continue to do its heady stuff through the summer. About Memorial Day it will suddenly go informal, and ladies and gentlemen in daytime clothes will pass muster with the austere and ornamental maitre d'hotel. Which is a blessing for the boys—how they hate to be strapped up in a boiled shirt in July. Mine simply won't—if he's not welcome in white linen, he'll simply stay away.

So if you come to see us in the next few months, don't worry about fancy dress! Even our flossiest spots unbend in the summer—with the result that people seem to have more fun. Except, perhaps, the girls who have magnificent new evening dresses they want to flaunt. And they can flaunt if they like!

* * * *

GIRL ABOUT TOWN: The local Russian colony (white) celebrated its Easter, according to the orthodox calendar, with great fasting followed by much feasting. Their ceremonies are long, varied and colorful, and some of them involve too much vodka and brandy for one who is practically teetotal. But it's a great feast, and they celebrate it greatly.

* * * *

All women are shoe-crazy, but the ones who really have to watch their foot-health are the dancers. Take Doris Humphrey, who dances often with Charles Wiedman. Doris works on the stage in her bare pinkies, but she spends an appalling amount on the correct street shoes. She buys only shoes that support her ankles and insteps and permit her toes to lie straight. And she tells me that not since her school days has she worn a heel more than 2 inches high. That's giving all for art.

* * * *

Easter saw one very big and happy reunion here! The seven Ogilvie Sisters, of hair fame, all got together here in town for the holiday—the first time they've all rallied in five years. Georgina came back from France, and so did Miss Beth. Dr. Gladys hurried home from Florida, and Miss Jessica from a Nation-wide tour. Add Sisters Anne, Clara and Mabel and we had all seven under one roof. They gave one nice big party for their friends here, too . . .

Anna Case Mackay, wife of the Postal Telegraph tycoon, has turned writer of popular songs. The former Metropolitan diva has just sold two numbers—one a jazzy item called "Hippa-Hoo," the other a ballad, "Just an Old-Fashioned Picture." And so the famous singer of "The Star-Spangled Banner" adds to her other affairs a career as a tune-writer.

* * * *

I hear that Paul Draper, our favorite tap-dancer, has a girl friend named Estrella Elizagas, who was Estelle Carrol when she lived over the river in Brooklyn. But what's a name where love's concerned.

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!

By Ida Jean Kain.

EXERCISE DOES SUCH lovely things for the figure! It is truly amazing how much you can improve your proportions—and how quickly—on a program of daily exercise, planned especially for your figure.

Just let me tell you about one determined young woman who, with a loss of only 10 pounds, slimmed 2 inches off the hips, 2 off the waistline and a half inch off the bust measurement. Ten pounds is not a very great weight loss, but while dieting moderately this reducer really worked at her exercise. She began with just 5 minutes a day and gradually increased the time allowance until she was exercising for 45 minutes every day. She had selected exercises that are strenuous, so the 45 minutes was divided into two periods, one in the morning and the other in the evening.

No Results at Once.

As often happens even on the best regulated exercise program, this young woman did not begin to see results right away. At the end of three weeks her measurements were the same as at the beginning, but she kept on. Besides, she found that exercise made her feel good! At the end of three more weeks, the waist and hipline were 2 inches less and her figure perfect.

Had this young woman confined her efforts at reducing to a strict diet, more than likely all the weight would have been lost from the upper part of her body. By concentrating on exercises for the hips and waist, she managed to take the weight off exactly as she pleased.

Any figure can be improved with exercise, but this is especially true for the women whose weight is within 10 per cent of normal. That amount of excess weight is small.

Properly distributed, it would not be noticeable, but when the measurements are out of proportion an extra pound on a hipline already too large can make the figure problem seem worse than it is. Don't feel hopeless about your figure. There is nothing wrong with it that cannot be fixed with exercise, and if your weight is nearly normal, so much the better.

You will have to take your measurements and decide where you need slimming and where you need building up . . . and don't overlook the fact that you can do both with the proper exercise. While taking a tuck in the waistline you can fill out the chest and raise the bust contour.

Movement Explained.

Position: Stand against the wall, arms stretched high overhead and against wall. Have the heels as close to the wall as you can get them and still have the small of the back flat against the wall. In order to do this you may at first have to place the heels a few inches away from the wall.

Movement: Keeping the entire back flat against the wall—hips, small of back, nape of neck and back of head—bend the body sideward. Hold for a moment, return to the upward stretching position, and bend to the other side.

Child's Books Should Be Part Of Careful Plan

Experts Advise Against Haphazard Choice of Reading Matter.

By Genevieve Reynolds.

WHOEVER introduces a book to a child should understand both the child and the book. This is the consensus of a group of Washington children's authors, librarians, booksellers and mothers who met recently at Green Acres School to determine "What Constitutes Good Literature for Children."

"Specific plans should be made for the child's reading rather than left to haphazard selection," explained Miss Nora Beust, who is in charge of the libraries of the United States Office of Education and was formerly a member of the University of North Carolina faculty.

More Humor Needed.

"The best choice of a child's book is the 'right book for the right child at the right time,'" she said. "By that I mean the book that fits the need of the individual.

More humor and less grimness is needed in children's books. They ought to laugh and enjoy a book. Also give children books that will help them solve their own problems suggested Miss Buest.

A child who is easily excited, nervous and overly imaginative should have more factual than fanciful material, agreed the members of the panel, which was composed of Mrs. Eva Knox Evans, teacher at Green Acres School, Miss Ellen McBride Brown, editor of the Junior Red Cross News;" Helen and William Pryor, author of children's books; Edward Huberman, translator of children's stories; Hilda Conkling, child poet and author; Francess Carpenter Huntington, author of children's books, and Miss Maxine La Bounty, librarian in the children's department of the Public Library.

Reality Desirable.

"What requirements do children's books have to meet in order to be good literature?" Miss Buest was asked.

"In the realm of fiction or fancy," she replied, "there must be the quality of verisimilitude. The characters must be real. That is they must be children who could have lived somewhere and acted in such a manner. Problems in books should be similar to those of the child reader so they may be closely identified with his own troubles.

"Furthermore, books that deal with success should emphasize personal achievement outside the realm of economic or monetary success."

Both parents and teachers expressed a desire for children's books that had realistic endings rather than the proverbial "they lived happily ever afterward" ending. Children themselves prefer the realistic endings.

THE GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay.

Wife's Soliloquy.

I

When do I want the presence of a man about me?
Why, when I have a can that must be opened,
A door that sticks, a radio that has static;
When on a rainy street mid jungle throngs
I need a taxi; or when I doubt my own decision
Concerning a freak hat bought under pressure;
Or when I puzzle over reaching strange addresses,
Or when I take a trip and want the baggage tended,
Time tables deciphered, bellhops ordered grandly.

II

I want him round when I would know the lowdown on divorces,
And other gossip gleanings from the hotel lobbies;
And what it is she has, that redhead on the corner,
Or when I face my women enemies, or spinster friends,
Under cold appraisal; or when the world goes wrong,
And children misbehave and maids get sassy,
And relatives condemn, and women friends are catty,
And poorhouse looms and war scares frighten,
And all seems chaos, and I need a rock of refuge.

III

When do I want him off on some lone island?
Why when I'm taking junk out of his closet,
Or waxing floors, or coating chairs with varnish,
Or when the window sill I'd rid of pipes and matches,
Or when I plan to have a light lunch without cooking,
Or ordering meat; or when my mother comes to visit,
Or when I want to have a good talk with my sister,
On family skeletons, or discuss thoroughly,
With women friends, the merits of new permanents.

IV

I want him not when I would do my throat line exercises,
Or wear my old house slippers and forget a moment,
What all the books say about holding husbands;
Or when the market sags, or Congress raises taxes,
Or Roosevelt does something that he oughtn't;
Or when I have the hermit urge to lock my door,
And gently drink the heavenly quiet of aloneness,
And feel about me hovering like a timid stranger,
That entity myself whom I would know a little better.

Lilliputia.

"What a cute little dress!"

"Yes, I got it at the nicest little shop . . . they specialize in sizes over 18."

"Say, my little hairdresser was telling me about a new little place . . . she got the darlingest little hat there—one of those cartwheel brims."

"A little friend of mine put me next to this place . . . she'd been having so much trouble with her hips. Say, isn't that Maisie Waddle over there?"

"It is! With Chunk Peters! Don't they make a cute little couple?"

"Chunk's got the sweetest little mother."

"I met Maisie's grandmother the other day . . . she lives in the darlingest little bungalow out by us!"

"Say, I got to be getting along. Mr. Flint'll be furious . . . he's got nobody there but that new little nitwit stenographer."

"Have you taken on a new little girl?"

"Yes, I'm leaving next week. I'm getting married."

"No!"

"Yes! We've rented the dearest little apartment. I so want you to see it. And meet John. He's the most wonderful little—I mean he's the most wonderful fellow."

Detail for Spring.

Paris (U.P.).—The Duchess of Windsor's conspicuous attention to detail has made Paris designers detail conscious. Superb co-ordination of line and unique detail mark the latest creations for daytime wear which show a decided tendency for tighter waists and fuller skirts. Junia Culbertson, Soprano, Wins Acclaim With Her Concert, Which Is Attended by Distinguished Audience at Mayflower 900 Hear Daughter of Former Ambassador to Chile Give Operatic Program in Four Languages; Misses Hookins and Bentley Assist.

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

With the poise of a full-fledged professional, Miss Junia Culbertson, daughter of the former United States Ambassador to Chile and Mrs. William S. Culbertson, yesterday proved her prowess as an artist in four languages and a program that would stagger many a star of the Metropolitan Opera.

The occasion was her first big concert—an event driwing almost 900 persons to the ballroom of the Mayflower Hotel at 4 o'clock. Guests who have known the talented soprano's parents for many years and scores of her own contemporaries were in the audience that at first glance had all the earmarks of a Townsend morning musicale.

HOPE R. MILLER.

A small, graceful figure on a stage banked with bouquets and huge blossom-laden baskets, Miss Culbertson was, as someone expressed it, "easy on the eyes as well as the ears." She wore a floor-length, flesh-colored frock, fashioned with a brief black lace bolero matching the lace that was appliqued around the bottom of the skirt and styled in two points in front. With it she wore a pink petal turban, set off with a small black veil arranged in a bow on the side. Assisting on the program were Miss Ardelle Hookins, flutist, and Miss Elizabeth Bentley, accompanist. The former was gowned in buttercup chiffon, and the latter wore orchid crepe de chine. Both are from Philadelphia, where Miss Culbertson has studied voice for three years.

Bachelor Ushers Help Seat Guests

A dozen dapper ushers, all bachelors, and each trimly turned out in formal attire, were very much in action during the first half of the program. In the group were Waverly Taylor, Duncan Clark, Harold Deveau, Smith Bowman, Charles Clark, James Mann, Frank Walker, Decio de Moura, Maj. Horace Smith, Ditlef Knudsen and Phronnie Ladd.

Glimpsed among guests at the concert were envoys from both countries to which Mr. Culbertson has been sent as United States envoy. Before he represented this country in Chile he was Minister to Rumania, and among yesterday's guests were the new Rumanian Minister and Mme. Radu Irimescu, making their bows at their first big event here. Also in the audience was the Ambassador of Chile, Manuel Trucco, who was accompanied by his daughter, Miss Rebeca Trucco.

Members of the diplomatic corps and residential society were much more in evidence than official society, although the latter also was well represented. Mrs. Claude A. Swanson was there; also Mrs. Owen J. Roberts and her daughter, Miss Elizabeth Roberts, the latter in a handsome grey ensemble; and Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone. Mrs. James J. Davis arrived with her daughter, Miss Jane Davis, and Mrs. Robert H. Jackson and Mrs. Roswell Magill were in the audience. Mrs. William D. Leahy, in a black ensemble came with her sister, Mrs. Albert Niblack. Mrs. William E. Borah, Mrs. Hamilton Fish, Mrs. Royal S. Copeland, Mrs. Donald Richberg, and Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg, who arrived with Mrs. Royal McKenna, were others from official circles.

Many Notables Glimpsed in Crowd

Following the concert, guests went from the ballroom to the Chinese room, where tea was served at a long table in the center, and punch was poured at smaller tables on either side. Tall white tapers and three large vases of spring flowers—peonies, snapdragons and roses—helped to make the heavily laden buffet one of the most attractive I have seen this season.

Glimpsed among the guests, either around the table or earlier at the concert were Mrs. Francis Whitten, in a snappy black and white ensemble; Mrs. Lothrop Stoddard who had with her Mrs. Aacheson Smith, of New York; Mrs. Louis Owsley, Mrs. Ralph William Close, who was with her daughter, Mrs. W. S. Mann; the Greek Minister, Demetrios Sicilianos; the Netherlands Minister with his daughter, Mlle. Nora Van Haersma de With; Mrs. Charles Lea, Mr. and Mrs. Wade H. Ellis; Mme. Eero Jarnfelt, Col. and Mrs. Howard Davidson, Admiral and Mrs. Mark Bristol, Mrs. J. L. Houghteling, wearing a trim wood's violet coat with a small black hat; the Minister of Latvia and Mme. Alfred Bilmanis, Hector Leguizamon, of the Argentine Embassy.

Also, the Cuban Ambassador, Dr. Pedro Martinez Fraga, the Secretary of the Canadian Legation and Mrs. Merchant Mahoney, with the former's daughter, Miss Anne Mahoney; the Counselor of the Argentine Embassy and Hector Ghiraldo, the latter in a handsome black outfit, set off with a silver fox neckpiece; Mrs. Henry Parsons Erwin, Mrs. William A. Morgan, Mrs. George Pettingill, the Soviet Ambassador and Mme. Alexander Troyanovsky, J. Crawford Biggs, Mme. Munte de Morgensiterne, Mrs. George Barnett, Miss Mary Patten and Miss Josephine Patten, Mrs. Emil Hurja, Mrs. Peyton March, Mrs. Breckinridge Bayne, Mrs. William T. Mann, and so on, through the diplomatic blue book and the social register.

Mrs. Brand Blanchard To Attend Luncheon

Mrs. Brand Blanchard, dean of Swarthmore College and an alumna of Smith College, will be among guests at the luncheon today at the Raleigh in honor of President William Allan Neilson, of Smith.

Others who have made reservations for the luncheon include Mrs. R. M. Kauffmann, Mrs. Ernest Griffith, Mrs. W. D. MacDougall, Mrs. Eben E. Smith, Mrs. Mark A. Smith, Mrs. John Wilson, Mrs. Robert Wilson, Miss Eileen O'Daniel, Miss Sally Stewart and Miss Jane Stafford.

Mrs. Russell Magna, former president general of the D. A. R., and a graduate of Smith, will also attend the luncheon.

Two Diplomats Visit New York

Two of Washington's most popular diplomatic families are in New York this week-end—the Minister of Switzerland and Mme. Marc Peter, and the Minister of Norway and Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne.

The Peters are attending the luncheon of the New York branch of the Alliance Francaise of which the minister is honorary vice president. While in Manhattan, they are the guests of Pierre Cartier.

On Monday Mr. Peter will meet the Swiss Minister for the World's Fair, Mr. Lienert, who will arrive in this country on that day, to make arrangements for the Swiss exhibition.

Yesterday the Norwegian Minister and Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne attended the banquet of the American-Scandanavian Foundation at the Plaza. The minister presented the Commander's Cross of the Order of St. Olav to Dr. Henry Goddard Leach, former president of the foundation, and editor of the Forum.

Poland's Envoy Returns Today

Count Jerzy Potocki, Polish Ambassador, will return today from New York, where he went yesterday to see his brother, Count Alfred Potocki, off for Europe.

The latter will sail today on the Bremen to return to Poland after spending several months in New York, Florida and Washington.

The first part of next month the Minister will go again to New York to receive Judge magazine's high hat, awarded to him for his sense of humor.

Engaged

Harris & Ewing.

Miss Pauline Corkran, whose parents, the Rev. and Mrs. Clarence H. Corkran, of Washington, have announced her engagement to James S. Spratt, son of Mayor and Mrs. James L. Spratt, of Bucksport, Me. The wedding will take place May 11 at the Douglas Memorial Methodist Church.

Underwood & Underwood.

And it was Miss Junia Culbertson, daughter of the former United States Ambassador to Chile and Mrs. William S. Culbertson, who furnished the music. She made her debut as a singer yesterday afternoon at a program given at the Mayflower Hotel . . . an event to which Washington society came a-flocking, and left applauding.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

YESTERDAY afternoon found a goodly part of Washington society at Clarence Hewes' home on Massachusetts avenue. He entertained at a cocktail party in honor of Mrs. Harry McCall and Miss Dorothy Spencer, of New Orleans, who are visiting him.

DUDLEY HARMON.

The nicest feature about the party was that the guests could go out on the terrace and admire nature. A flight of steps leads to a little garden, with a small fountain in the wall and tables and chairs there. Wisteria vines framing the porch leading to the garden made the scene all the more attractive.

• • • •

THE HOST and his guests of honor received in the drawing room, with its Chinese paintings and silk wall hangings. Mr. Hewes used to be in the diplomatic service, and spent several years in the Far East.

Mrs. McCall had an interesting color combination—a blue skirt with a bodice of chartreuse chiffon. Miss Spencer was in a brocaded dress and both sported corsages of orchids.

AMONG those we saw were Mme. van Haersma de With, in the ever-becoming black, with one of those hats that tie under the chin; Frau Herbert Scholz. Frau Hans Thomsen and Frau Herbert Blankenhorn; Edgar Prochnik and the Immigration Commissioner and Mrs. J. L. Houghteling.

Mrs. Matthews Dick, who is outdoing herself on hats these days, wore a very fetching number, quite small, made of blue flowers and with a strap in the back. Countess Roberti also wore a tiny hat, hers being a skull cap of white violets.

Mrs. Buchanan Herryman was there with Mrs. Gilbert Hitchcock, both in black. Also in dark shades was Mrs. Albert Dewey, except for her hat, which was yellow.

Others present were Miss Marian Trumbull, in a smart black suit and a broad brimmed white hat; Ralph Snowden Hill; Mrs. Mark Bristol, in a spring print; Nathan Bartlett; Mrs. Daniel C. Stapleton and Miss Stellita Stapleton; Mrs. Thomas Bell Sweeney, Mme. van Kaathoven, Mrs. George T. Pettingill, in brown; Mrs. Wallach Merriam, Robert Coe, Mrs. Mondell Gregg, in a tailored suit with silver fox furs; Mrs. Emil Hurja, and many more.

Is the vogue of wearing things in the hair disappearing? At the Polish Embassy the other evening there were very few women with ornaments in their coiffures, though several wore ribbon bows. . . . Capt. Meyer Ranneft, newly arrived Naval Attache of the Netherlands legation, has taken an apartment at the Caravel. He has a wife, a very pretty daughter of the sub-debutante age, and a younger son . . . You can almost tell who among the Representatives are up for re-election by seeing which of them entertain for the D. A. R.'s. So far practically every one who is running in the near future has entertained delegates from his State at luncheon or tea.

REPORTS say that the Duke and Duchess of Windsor were not socially very successful during their recent trip to Cannes. It seems that the duchess is very insistent on ceremony, and has a particular penchant for the curtsy. Several Riviera women wanted to give parties for the pair, but could find no Americans who felt like bending the knee to a countrywoman, even if she was a duchess. And English people rarely accept invitations to parties for the Windsors, says our informant.

Many to Attend Ballet Reception

Many prominent Washingtonians will attend the reception and program to be given by the committee for the Washington National Ballet on May 2 at 9 p. m. at the little King-Smith Playhouse. Gay Gingham Graces Ball at Raleigh Hotel

Men Wear Overalls and Blue Shirts at Annual Dance.

Gay little frocks of gingham were worn last evening by young ladies who danced at the Gingham Ball at the Raleigh Hotel. Their squires forsook white tie and tails for blue shirts and overalls.

The party, which was inaugurated several years ago by Mrs. Neitah King, proved one of the nicest events on the spring calendar. At the event, to which cards had been issued, supper was served at midnight on tables with gingham cloths, handsomely decorated with vegetable centerpieces.

Receiving with Mrs. King were Mrs. James H. Hughes, Mrs. Walter Wyatt, Mrs. Frederick Richardson, of Fairfax; Mrs. Robert Graham, Mrs. Hal B. Clagett, of Weston, Upper Marlboro, Md.; Mrs. I. L. Kitts, of Fort Myer; Mrs. Jeter Horton, Mrs. Benjamin H. Dorsey, Miss Antoinette Rudolph and Mrs. L. B. Norris.

Miss Fanchon Aldrich, who made her debut this year at the Congressional Club, was chairman of the ball, and Miss Billy Gruman was vice chairman.

Glimpsed among the dancers were Miss Betty Boshen, Miss Eula Council, Miss Randolph Richardson, Miss Sally McCandlish, of Baltimore; Miss Betty Marsh, and Miss Genevieve Marsh, in town for the Easter holidays from Sweet Briar College.

Marjorie Quinter Has Two Weddings, Second Yesterday

Hessler Studio.
MRS. JOHN McCLOSKEY.

Miss Marjorie Zetelle Quinter and John Joseph McCloskey, who were married April 16 at Elkton, Md., were principals in a second ceremony yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the Shrine of the Blessed Sacrament. The Rev. Thomas Smyth officiated. Only immediate members of the family were present. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hubbert Roger Quinter, of Bethesda, Md., while Mr. McCloskey is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Leo McCloskey, of Philadelphia.

The bride wore a navy-blue sheer woolen suit made very simply in bolero style. Her soft white blouse was of batiste and lace. A navy-blue bonnet of rough straw and grosgrain ribbon completed her ensemble with accessories of navy blue. Her corsage was of white orchids and lilies of the valley.

A small reception was held at Oakcrest, the estate of the bride's parents, on Bradley boulevard. Mrs. Quinter wore a navy-blue sheer crepe gown with a cluster of purple orchids and lilies of the valley at the neckline. Mrs. McCloskey, mother of the bridegroom, was attired in a black and white print with touches of green. Her corsage was of Belmont gardenias and lilies of the valley.

Revolutionary Chatter Is Deplored by Writer

Stop Frightening the Children With Talk of When It Will Happen Here, Margaret Culkin Banning Tells Congressional Club Group.

Light table talk about the possibility of revolution in this country should be abandoned and we should stop frightening children, members of the Congressional Club were told yesterday by Margaret Culkin Banning, distinguished writer and lecturer, who addressed them yesterday.

Mrs. Banning, who is here from her home in Minnesota to attend the biennial convention of the National League of American Pen Women, is a niece of Representative Francis D. Culkin, of New York, and Mrs. Culkin, who is a member of the club.

If we spent time talking about what we have, and really investigating causes which might lead to a revolution, we would do a better job, the author told her audience. We have no solid philosophy to protect us against political theories, she pointed out, and we are apt to let minor dissensions divert us from the common purpose which we all have to preserve democracy.

Taking as her subject the lightly repeated question, "How Near Are We to Revolution?" Mrs. Banning warned against what she called "the revolutionary game"—idle talk of the possibility of such a crisis here, which usually ends when some one remarks that we are now in the midst of a revolution, although it is a bloodless one.

Revolution and Change Are Different

There is a vast difference between revolution and change, Mrs. Banning pointed out, describing her experience in San Sebastian, Spain, when the trouble began there. People who speak lightly of revolution are like children who play with toy soldiers and think the war can be ended by putting them back in the box, she said. The danger in such talk is that people who should be alert to conditions and means of remedying conditions which might bring about an effort to overthrow the government, benumb their judgment by repeating stock phrases and fail to do the clear thinking which is imperative to solve our social and economic problems.

Whatever happens, in this country will not be left in the hands of economists or politicians, she asserted. Popular interest in public affairs has been developed through the press and the radio as never before and the force of popular feeling will be manifest.

Mrs. Banning said we were developing a kind of fatalism expressed in such phrases as: "The pendulum will swing back," and "Things go in cycles." She reminded her audience that the pendulum had not swung back—that we had not returned to stage coaches or bustles and that an intelligent study of history showed things did not necessarily "go in cycles." No one should talk about economic curves and cycles except those who know enough about them to discount them, she said.

Many D. A. R. Delegates Attend Meeting

She was saddened, she declared, by the sober, serious generation of young people which was growing up under the influence of this kind of conversation.

Mrs. Banning was introduced by Mrs. Daniel A. Reed, president of the Congressional club, and received with her at the tea which followed her talk. Many of the members had with them as guests, delegates from their states who are here attending the Continental Congress of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

National Order To Link Women In Legislatures

New Group Is Organized to Encourage Participation in Public Affairs.

Women legislators—past and present—yesterday organized the "National Order of Women Legislators" to encourage greater participation by competent women in public affairs.

Mrs. Albert Hamilton Emery, of Stamford, Conn., whose Connecticut organization of women legislators invited the national group to meet, was elected president. There are now 139 women serving in legislatures of 34 States, she said.

Members and former members of State legislative bodies here for the organization meeting were received by President Roosevelt at the White House Thursday.

Officers chosen were: Miss Anna F. O'Neill, of Akron, Ohio; Miss Florence Haines, of Newark, N. J.; Mrs. Luella Brown, of Roswell, N. Mex., and Miss Marion Martin, of Bangor, Me., vice presidents; Miss Ruth Shoemaker, of Bethesda, Md., recording secretary; Mrs. Marian Roberts, of Hartford, Conn., and Mrs. Martha Brookings, of Mass., corresponding secretaries: Mrs. Mildred F. Rich, of Salt Lake City, Utah, treasurer; Mrs. Ruth O'Dell, of Newport, Tenn., historian; and Mrs. Mildred F. Rich, of Salt Lake City, Utah, treasurer.

Committee chairmen appointed included Miss May Carty, of New Jersey City, N. J., membership; Mrs. Earl Lewis, of Monroe, Conn., publicity, and Mrs. Gladys B. Stewart, of Ava, Mo., finance.

North Carolinians Elect J. W. Jenkins

The North Carolina Society of Washington has elected John Wilber Jenkins, of the Federal Power Commission, president to succeed Giles Yoemans Newton, who headed the society for the past two years.

Other officers named were Wade B. Hampton, first vice president; Senator Robert B. Reynolds, second vice president; Miss Annie Lee Chisholm, secretary-treasurer; Dr. Charles Berry Austin, chaplain, and Mrs. John K. Slear, historian. Members of the board of governors chosen were Mr. Newton, Mrs. Josiah W. Bailey, William E. Stroud, Justice Justin Miller, Mrs. W. Ney Evans, Dr. Vera Millsaps and Dr. Fred W. Morrison.

After a business meeting Thursday night, the society held a reception and dance in honor of Mrs. Eugene Norfleet Davis, State regent, and other officers and delegates attending the D. A. R. Congress.

Bluebonnets Sent To Texas Society

Bluebonnets, the State flower, are being sent from Texas for the Texas Society dance tonight at the Washington Hotel. The Marlin (Texas) Chamber of Commerce is sending the flowers by plane to be given to those attending the party. Marlin is the home of Senator Tom Connally. The dance is to be held at 9 p. m. and will be in commemoration of the battle of San Jacinto.

The members of the Daughters of the American Revolution from Texas who are at their annual convention have been extended an invitation by Mrs. Howard Sheppard to be honor guests at the dance.

Representative Charles L. Smith, of Coleman, Tex., will make a short talk on the battle of San Jacinto, which meant so much to the United States. The victory won by the Texans at that battle led to the acquisition of the vast territory of the northwest, by this country.

Jesuit Will Show Movies of Meeting

The Ignatian Guild of Washington is sponsoring a lecture at the Gonzaga Theater, 45 I street, on Sunday evening, May 1, when the Rev. E. Paul Amy, S. J., will show his motion pictures of the Eucharistic Congress held at Manila, together wit h other interesting scenes from the Orient.

Officers of the guild are Bernard M. Wise, president; the Rev. Lawrence J. Kelly, S. J., moderator; Mrs. Francis J. Daly, vice president; Miss Margaret O'Leary, secretary, and Miss Ellen T. Becker, treasurer.

"Madame Chairman" . . .

TODAY the National League of American Pen Women will begin a round of festivities in connection with its biennial convention, opening Monday in the Willard Hotel. The authors' breakfast will be held at 11:45, the final board meeting of the administration of Mrs. Phyllis Fergus Hoyt as national president, tonight at 8 and the book fair under Mrs. Dorothy DeMuth Watson, at 8:30.

Tomorrow, following a tea at the studio of the Washington Branch from 3 to 5, there will be a buffet supper, opening the art exhibits of the work of members of the league at the Arts Club. Mrs. Minnie Briggs, etcher, is chairman of the art committee. Registration begins at 10 Monday with the business meeting following.

ONE of the pen women here for the convention is Mrs. Mabel Posegate, of Cincinnati, poet laureate of Ohio. She is widely known for her verse and has been honored by the planting of a dogwood tree in tribute to her at the Walnut Hills High School of which she is a graduate.

She comes as a delegate from the Cincinnati Branch of the N. L. P. W. of which she is vice president. Her books of poems are "Silver Scuthheon," "Once, When Arcturus Shone" and "White Moment."

MRS. JOHN E. RANKIN, wife or Representative Rankin, has issued invitations for a luncheon May 5, in honor of Mrs. Percy Edward Quin, State regent of the Misssissippi Daughters of the American Revolution. Mrs. Quin is a former vice president of the Congressional Club, at which the luncheon is to be given, and is also a former president of the Colonial Dames Club of Washington.

THE NORTH WING of the D. A. R. Museum in Memorial Continental Hall was crowded yesterday as members of the District of Columbia Chapters presented a wall case in tribute to their retiring State regent, Mrs. Charles Carroll Haig, who will be installed tonight as a vice president general.

Mrs. Fred B. Linton, acting State chaplain, opened the program with prayer which was followed by the presentation by Mrs. William B. Sinnott, chairman of the District of Columbia museum committee, an impromptu tribute to Mrs. Haig by Miss Janet Richards, regent of Mary Washington Chapter, and the acceptance by Miss Emeline A. Street, acting curator general. Mrs. Haig responded with an expression of appreciation not only for the honor bestowed on her but also for the co-operation of her co-workers and officers during her term at the head of the District chapters.

Immediately following the ceremony, the new State officers of the District, headed by Miss Lillian Chenoweth, were formally installed in the auditorium of Continental Hall.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

Love must be sweeping the country again; the Capital has filled up the last week with young people holding hands openly and defiantly as they saunter among the sights and wonders. You see five times as many moon-eyed hand-holders along the Mall as you ever did in Niagara Falls.

* * * *

After a few hours of sightseeing the tourists are still merry and exalted, but they don't look it. Their faces become a little grim, a trifle strained. But that's merely because their leg muscles begin to stiffen, their feet to hurt and their egos droop with awe.

WELTPOLITIK: When Herr Hitler gets around to it, he will have a ready-made German colony on the coast of Brazil to shake under the noses of the Brazilians who have closed its German schools. It's Puerto Alegre, a town about the size of Danzig, in southern Brazil, whose population is three-quarters German, and has been for a long time.

On a spring evening (it's autumn down there now) the blonde fraulein on the promenade outnumber the brunets so much you'd think you were in Hamburg. Just a suggestion for the Fuehrer against the day when he learns to walk on water.

A diplomat's wife may need to be even more diplomatic than her husband. One foreign lady complains that when her husband tells her to be nice to a member of the Foreign Affairs Committee, it is a delicate task, to be just warm enough to cement his friendship for dear old Granstark, but not so warm as to seem flirtatious and arouse the jealousy of his wife.

CAPITAL CAVIAR: When Mrs. Roosevelt devotes an afternoon to playing bridge, that will be front page news . . . Admiration for the unified power of the Catholic Church in such matters as movie, radio, news and picture censorship, the Spanish situation and birth control may be the one thing to inspire the Protestant sects to merge (so sayeth a dominie at a tea party) . . . A Congressman is telling his colleagues on the hill that in one small town in his district 700 special delivery airmail letters (with 16 cents postage on each) were received urging people to send telegrams to Washington against the reorganization bill . . . A Treasury official who is a little incredulous about the $185,000 paid by the Cubs for Pitcher Dizzy Dean tells me that he'll not make up his mind until he sees that amount on the Card's income tax next year as a capital gain at baseball, the national pastime.

* * * *

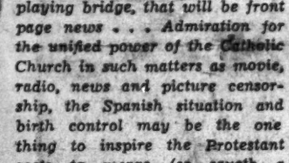
NOW IT CAN BE TOLD: But not, apparently, until now. Yesterday a Senator told me that it was Vice President Garner who engineered the defeat of the Supreme Court bill in the Senate; and an hour later a Representative told me it was also Cactus Jack who pulled the wires for defeat of the reorganization bill in the House.



". . . shotgun instead of a rifle"

Metaphors of the week, by John Cowles, a Western newspaper publisher who "admires President Roosevelt's social vision:"

"If the President would use a rifle instead of a shotgun in his attacks, so business would know just who was being aimed at, it would clear the air."

" . . . National income will be enormously increased as the golden goose recuperates and regains its maximum egg laying capacity."

But maybe the President has been using a shotgun loaded with pepper, like a householder trying to scare the boys who are determined (on this harrowing Halloween) to push over the shed.

Director Picked For Inquiry on District Relief

Score of Persons Considered for Impartial Task, Committee Says.

Selection of a director to head the District relief investigation was announced yesterday by Ringgold Hart, chairman of the committee named by Congress to conduct the inquiry.

Announcement of the director's name, however, will not be made until approval by Senator Elmer Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma, chairman of the Senate District Appropriations Committee, and Representative Ross Collins (Democrat), of Mississippi, chairman of the House District Appropriations Committee.

It is expected that Congress will approve the selection of the relief investigation head who will study the entire relief set-up in the District.

Congress appropriated $10,000 for the study and a report must be made by August 1. The committee will attempt to find out the adequacy or inadequacy of the funds available for relief as well as the facts on unemployment in the District.

Following a determined effort by civic organizations to gain an investigation of the relief set-up, Representative Collins introduced the measure. The Board of Public Welfare, at the time, promised cooperation to any person selected to head the investigation.

The committee, headed by Hart, considered more than 20 persons for the position of director, giving particular attention to ability and impartiality.

Dust Is a Reportable Offense In Print Bureau Safety Drive

Committee Combs Every Cranny of Buildings for Danger Spots, Ferreting Out Sloppy Janitor Work; Record Has Been Good.

The unique drive by the Bureau of Printing and Engraving to increase fire, safety and health precautions among its 5,400 employes is giving janitors a headache.

Every speck of dust in years past nonchalantly pushed under radiators is being ferreted out by a committee of seven combing every cranny of the buildings for danger spots. It has reached the point where 19 bits of soap on a shower floor is a reportable offense.

The committee has been functioning since last December in an effort to do away with all fire, health and safety hazards in the buildings.

The program is the only one of its kind in any government department, as it was outlined yesterday by Director Alvin W. Hall, who is responsible for the five-day week and numerous technical and personnel improvements at the bureau.

To date concentration has been on fire prevention. Each speck of dust, each oily scrap of paper, each uncleaned ventilator is considered a danger spot and is being cleaned up.

To form an efficient fire-fighting outfit, John A. Plummer, for 18 years a District fireman and now a plumber and sheet metal worker, has been appointed chief fire marshal. He is training a staff of 375 volunteer firemen in specific duties in case fire should break out in any room of the buildings.

Plummer is also inspecting and putting into perfect condition every piece of fire-fighting equipment. Apparatus ranges from quart cans of chemicals to 50-pound containers of dry ice on portable trucks and water and gas hoses.

With the volunteers and apparatus any fire could be blanketed immediately and the area shut off from the rest of the building.

The only trouble with increased safety measures, Hall commented, is that even if fresh treads are placed on all stairs as recommended by the committee, they will not prevent falls by women who insist on wearing high heels and walk in a careless manner.

Even before the drive began, however, the bureau had a record of no damaging fires for years, an extremely small number of accidents among the 5,400 workers, and no known health hazards.

Hebrew Congregation to Give Father and Son Banquet Here

Fathers and their sons will unite in comcamaraderie and fun when the Brotherhood of the Washington Brotherhood of the Washington Hebrew Congregation holds its Father and Son banquet at the Mayflower Hotel tomorrow night.

There will be all of those things dear to the hearts of boys—baseball stars and vaudeville players, motion pictures and side-show freaks.

Prizes will be given the boys by Charles Rosenthal, and there will be "lucky dollar bills" in envelopes, for the exchange of which boys will receive bats, baseball gloves, baseballs or baseball shoes.

J. Lawrence Phillips, of the Johnny J. Jones Exposition, will send his entire sideshow, and Walter Johnson will attend with many stars of the sporting world. A short address will be made by Martin Marden, the young German refugee.

The committee will have tickets to Warner Brothers', Loews' and Keith's theaters, Glen Echo and the exposition for the boys, as well as souvenirs.

Among the guests Sidney Lust, general chairman, will bring will be Maryland State Senator G. Lansdale Sasscer, Police Chief Ernest W. Brown, Carter Barron, John J. Payette, Hardie Meakin, Frederick William Wile, Clark Griffith, the Rev. John K. Cartwright, Gordon Hittenmark, Brooke Johns and the Rev. Dr. W. L. Darby, secretary of the Federation of Churches.

Besides Hoover, eight persons were elected as new members of the board. They are Myron A. Hofer, David E. Finley, Howland Chase, William J. Flather, jr., Walter F. Chappel, C. C. Glover, jr., Sam H. Kauffman and Richard Shands.

B. B. Sandidge, superintendent of the hospital, presented a report at the meeting which showed that during th ecalendar year 1937 the hospital gave 90,928 patient-days' service, the largest number in its history. The ambulances made 4,217 trips, there were 25,151 dispencary visits and 16,863 emergency room visits.

Wife Never Let Him Punish Boys, Tippett Declares

Disputes over disciplining their four sons were cited in District Court yesterday by Bradley J. Tippett, employe of the St. Elizabeth's Hospital, in answer to the suit of his wife, Mrs. Alpha Virginia Tippett, for divorce.

Two of the sons, Ellis and Ellsworth, are serving lengthy prison terms following their sentencing by Justice Jesse C. Adkins in District Court two weeks ago. The youths, one 17, the other 20, were charged with numerous robberies and an assault with intent to rob in a drunken orgy January 12. A third son, Wilmer, is serving a sentence at Lorton Reformatory on conviction, a couple of years ago, of assault.

Tippett stated he was always interfered with by his wife when he sought to discipline his sons.

Roosevelt Backs New Building For U.S. Army Medical Museum

World-Renowned Library Housing Million Books, Monographs and Pathological Displays Held Far Too Small for Growing Collection.

The Army's medical library and museum, world renowned among doctors and research scientists, deserves a new home in keeping with its importance and dignity, President Roosevelt believes.

At his press conference yesterday he heartily indorsed plans of War Secretary Woodring and Surgeon General Charles R. Reynolds to install the hundreds of thousands of books and pathological exhibits in an adequate structure.

For more than half a century the library and museum have been housed in a red stone building at Seventh street and Independence avenue, to the east of the old Smithsonian Building. According to Secretary Woodring and Gen. Reynolds, the collections have long since grown too large for the mid-Victorian building.

"We hope to secure a PWA allotment for the project if the public works program is extended," Gen. Reynolds declared. "General plans have been drawn up and construction could be started without delay after Congressional authorization and granting of funds."

Advice of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission will be requested in connection with the site, he said. The Secretary of War and the Surgeon General indicated their preference of a location along the Mall for the sake of close proximity to the Smithsonian Institution, Library of Congress and other research centers.

Established 102 years ago as the Surgeon General's library, the Army's collection of medical books today is the largest in the world. It contains 500,000 volumes and a like number of monographs, pamphlets and other publications.

Four hundred and sixty of the 600 titles of medical incunabula—books printed in the 15th century—known to be in existence are in the library.

Its facilities are used by physicians and scientists throughout the world. Last year 14,000 volumes were loaned civilian readers in all parts of the country through arrangements with local public libraries.

D.C. Gas Co. Kept From Buying Two Suburban Firms

For the fourth time in two years, the Public Utilities Commission yesterday denied the Washington Gas Light Co. authorization to purchase the Hyattsville and Alexandria gas firms.

Previously the commission disapproved a plan to purchase the two suburban companies for an estimated $1,212,500.

The public utilities act for the District allows the company 60 days to appeal to the District Court. Both suburban companies, as well as the Washington Gas Light Co., are controlled by the Washington & Suburban Cos., a trust representing the Chase National Bank.

U. S. Agents Hunt Woman in 2 Cities As Counterfeiter

Secret Service agents last night were searching Washington and Baltimore for a white woman, believed to be the companion of two New York men arrested Thursday in connection with passage of $40 worth of counterfeit bills to a Washington merchant.

The men, arrested in Maryland, were held on open charges. Treasury officials here reported another arrest had been made in Baltimore.

Should Men Wash Dishes Debated

It was Ladies' Night at the Silver Spring Speakers' Club last night but the women guests couldn't get a word in edgeways, even though the members were debating whether husbands should wash the dishes.

The Speakers' Club, a male organization which meets at the Jesup Blair Community House every Friday night, let the women in for one evening provided that they didn't say anything. E. B. Hancock and Wilton T. Allen argued the dishwashing question. Allen won overwhelmingly. He had the negative and the women couldn't vote.

Bandit Sought As Assailant Of Physician

Sold Watch Stolen From Woman Aide of Veterans' Bureau.

Frightened away by a jeweler when he demanded $5,000 worth of diamonds, a 23-year-old colored man was being sought by police last night on the double charge of assaulting a woman physician and robbery.

Police revealed that the man who took $140 from Jacob Slavin, jeweler, at 1104 Fourteenth street northwest, is probably the same man who attacked Dr. Neil Bartram, Veterans' Administration doctor, Wednesday night behind her home at 1725 Seventeenth street northwest. They said the bandit had sold a watch, later traced as one taken from Dr. Bartram, at the jewelry store Thursday.

Slavin Shouts for Aid.

Last night he threatened Slavin with a revolver, pocketed the contents of the safe, and then demanded $5,000 worth of precious stones in the show window. Slavin reached into the window, then rapped on the window pane and shouted for police. The bandit then fled.

Three colored men attacked William A. Shipman, 65, of 3923 Georgia avenue, a trial examiner for the Bituminous Coal Commission, and robbed him of $10.50. He stabbed one of them with his pocket knife. Shipman, former assistant attorney general of Mississippi and United States Circuit Court of Appeals judge, said the trio threw him to the ground near Mount Vernon place and L street northwest and knocked him unconscious.

Police believe that the trio is the same that robbed Joseph Johnson, 1113 Morse street northeast, Post newsboy and son of a clerk at the Detective Bureau, of $10. He said he was thrown to the ground and threatened with knives near Twelfth and I streets northeast.

Cleaning Shop Robbed.

Meanwhile, other robberies and house-breakings were reported from various sections of the city. After striking Albert Smith, colored, 22, at a cleaning shop at 1835 Seventh street northwest, on the head with a wooden stick, three colored men stole $11 from a cash register, police reported.

Arthur G. Turner, postmaster of the Truxton Circle branch postoffice, 17 Florida avenue northeast, reported that house-breakers stole $6.11 worth of stamps during the night, but were unsuccessful in attempts to open the safe.

Other house-breakings netted $10 worth of cigarets at a filling station at 65 H street northwest, and $110.81, taken from a money box at a grocery store at 1402 Twelfth street northwest. Mr. Cohen told police $20 worth of clothing was stolen from his store at 1100 Seventh street northwest, and Charles W. Baker, manager of a grocery store at 1801 Ninth street northwest, said thieves had taken $35 worth of cigarets from his store.

Yankee Stadium, New York, April 22.—Side walks of New York. In Braddock's corner, the latest of the pug-operated restaurants in the vicinity of Madison Square Garden, is the most unique . . . The bar is in the form of a prize ring, complete with ropes and ring posts . . . Gene Tunney graciously attended the opening and was addressed almost reverentially by Braddock as "Mr. Tunney." . . . Late in the evening a down-and-out character approached Tunney's table, shook his finger in Tunney's face and shouted: "You in those funny clothes, you are riding high and mighty now, why don't you give me a job?" . . . P. S. He got the job . . . Because he was Tunney's trainer in the formative days of the youth who sprang from Greenwich Village to knock the heavyweight crown from the head of Jack Dempsey.

Differences between Joe DiMaggio and Jake Ruppert were patched up finally by Joe Gould, Braddock's manager . . . DiMaggio's closest friend in New York, Gould arranged with the Yankees for the compromise that brought DiMaggio into the fold . . . Andy Frain, maestro of the famed Chicago Ushers Union, is making arrangements to provide the Polo Grounds, Yankee Stadium and Ebbetts Field with the smartly-dressed ushers who, in full uniform, look like a platoon of Balkan field marshals on parade . . . You can get 2 to 1 that Barney Ross will beat Henry Armstrong when the welterweight and featherweight champions meet in New York on May 24 . . . And they are offering 1 to 2 that Ross will knock Armstrong out.

Lou Gehrig, who hasn't been able to make a hit in any of the Yankees' first five games, has fallen from grace with New York fans . . . today when he protested to Umpire Quinn that he had not swung at a pitch called a strike there were loud boos—not for the umpire, but for Gehrig . . . Gehrig finally managed to get on base today—by getting hit with a pitch. . . . Joe Cronin, Red Sox manager, recently did a generous turn for a baseball writer who tried him in print not so many years ago . . . the writer, out of work, was permitted to do a magazine article "By Joe Cronin," and keep all the proceeds.

Clark Griffith is squawking to the major league schedule committee about the arrangement which usually finds the Giants playing the Dodgers in nearby Brooklyn when the Nats are meeting the Yankees at Yankee Stadium . . . The New York ball parks labor troubles spawn from the fact that the municipal authorities refuse to police the parks in great numbers, thus forcing the stadiums to hire their own guards . . . Mayor LaGuardia attended the opening game of the Giants the other day only because the union-seeking picketers generously ceased their picketing for 15 minutes to allow him to enter the grounds.

• • • •

Jack Doyle, who was willing to rate the Yankees a 7-to-10 favorite when it appeared they would be without DiMaggio, is not cutting his odds, despite the end of the Frisco Italian's holdout siege . . . but he hurriedly revised his odds to make the Cubs favorites over the Giants in the National League after the deal that sent Dizzy Dean to the Chicago club . . . A New York gagster guesses that after Dean wins a few games with the Cubs he'll begin to take charge of the team . . . and probably will order Manager Charlie Grimm to get out there and play first base.

• • • •

Promoter Mike Jacobs, who has not yet announced the scene of the Schmeling-Louis fight on June 22, denies that Chicago has already been selected, but there is great doubt of that . . . the anti-Nazi movement in New York would threaten the financial success of any bout in which Schmeling figures here . . . Jacobs is using the delay to obtain a better deal from the Soldiers Field authorities, is the consensus . . . Jack Demsey picks Schmeling to beat Louis again because he thinks Schmeling is the better fighter . . . Which is a pretty good reason.

—A New York hotel has suddenly discovered that Buddy Lewis once used to play on its team in a Manhattan industrial league and will shortly begin to take great pride in the fact in the hotel literature . . . Taft Wright was seeing Yankee Stadium for the first time when he went to bat for the Nats in the first inning today . . . He singled . . . The Yankees made nine hits today but they didn't exactly snap out of their slump . . . Because they achieved nothing under a single, which is very much below par for the Yankees.

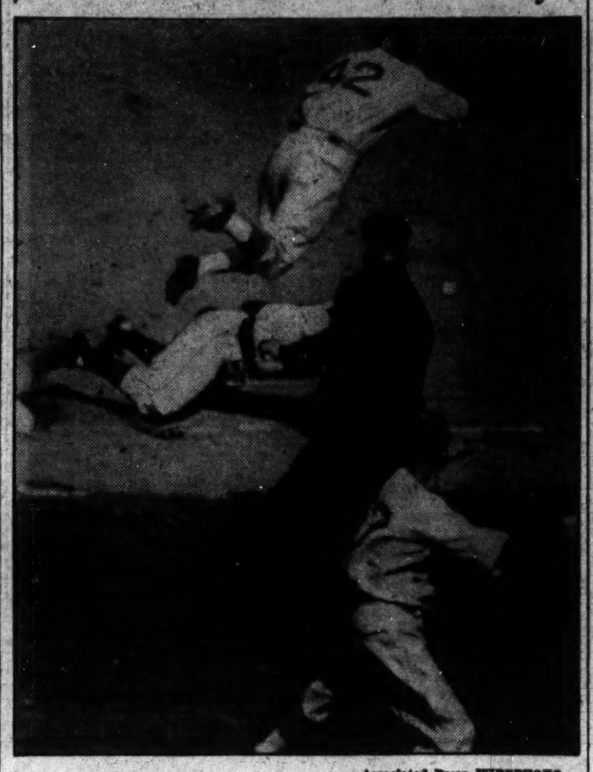
Nats Pin Hopes On Wes Ferrell Against Yankees

Yankee Stadium, N. Y., April 22.—Wes Ferrell, who escaped with a 12-8 victory over the Athletics in Washington's opener at Griffith Stadium, will return to the mound tomorrow at Yankee Stadium.

Manager Bucky Harris, who originally intended to start Ken Chase against the Yankees, has been unimpressed with the rookie southpaw who beat the Yanks twice last season and switched to Ferrell.

Lefty Gomez, an impressive winner over the Red Sox in his first start, will take the mound for the Yanks. That will cause a change in Harris' batting order. The right-handed Al Simmons will relieve Mel Almada in centerfield and Ossie Bluege will replace Buddy Myer at second base.

Cooke Reaches First the Hard Way



Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Fans thought Outfielder Cooke (42) was doing a tumbling act when he raced to first for Cincinnati in the opening inning in the game with Pittsburgh at Pittsburgh yesterday. He hurtled over Gus Suhr, guardian of the first sack, as Pitcher Lucas threw wild. Cooke tripped over the bag but was safe. Pirates won, 7-4.

Bartell's Hit Gives Giants 3-2 Victory

Doubles in 8th, Scoring 2 Runs; Camilli Raps Homer Before 31,154.

By Alan Gould,
Associated Press Sports Editor.

Brooklyn, N. Y., April 22.—The reconstructed Brooklyn Dodgers supplied the color, the crowd and the ceremony today for their 1938 debut before the Flatbush home folks but the New York Giants won the ball game, 3 to 2.

To make the anguish of the 31,154 onlookers all the more poignant, their favorites not only blew a succession of scoring chances but rowdy Dick Bartell, a particular annoyance to the Brooklyns, belted a double to centerfield fence that tallied Joe Moore with the winning run in the eighth inning.

Checked for six frames by young Luke Hamlin, the Giants got the tying run when Hank Leiber's double scored Mel Ott in the seventh. Hank Danning's double and Moore's single combined with Bartell's decisive blow account for two more runs in the eighth.

Replaced By Marrow.

Hamlin, after pitching three balls to Jim Ripple, was replaced by Buck Marrow, who issued the fourth ball but then induced Mel Ott to hit into a double play.

Harry (Houdini) Gumbert, making his first start, went the route for the Giants but needed all his own resources, as well as the expert defense of the National League champions to escape disaster. He did everything but the tight-wire act, aided by the conspicuous impotence of the Dodgers with runners on the bases.

Dolf Camilli, new first sacker, drove in the first Dodger run with a double, in the fourth, and produced the second all by himself with a towering blow over the right-field screen for his second homer of the season.

Leave Men on Bases.

The Brooklyns had at least one man on in every inning. In eight frames the first batsman reached base. They packed the bags in the sixth, with none out, on Cookie Lavagetto's third hit, a pass to Camilli and Johnny Hudson's attempted sacrifice, which went for a base hit when Gumbert fell trying to field it. But Leo Durocher hit into a double play and Hamlin rolled out after Roy Spencer was walked to fill the bases again.

Lavagetto, cleanup man and third sacker, was forced out of the Dodger line-up when he pulled a muscle in his right leg sliding into third base in the sixth. This was adding injury to insult for Lavagetto, with a .688 batting average for four games, has been the club's big punch.

Gehrig Slides Into Bag for a Put-Out

Lou Gehrig, Yankees' Iron Man first baseman, introduces a new wrinkle in covering the initial bag. Here he is shown sliding into the base after scooping up Buddy Lewis' grounder in the third inning of the Yankee-Nat game at the Yankee Stadium yesterday to retire the Nat. Red Ruffing, who checked the Nats' bats to only four singles, is standing by to aid Lou.

25,000 See 'Red' Check Griffs' Bats

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

Yankee Stadium, New York, April 22.—A large, florid gentleman named Red Ruffing, who was pitching to the great satisfaction of 25,000 opening-day customers at Yankee Stadium, brought Washington's 3-game winning streak to a grinding stop this afternoon.

The Nats' efforts against Ruffing amounted to exactly nothing. They took a 7-0 beating from Ruffing and his Yankee colleagues, but they took it chiefly from Ruffing. The portly right-hander pitched a fair ball game, holding the Nats to 4 hits.

If you insist on the full details of the Nats' futility against Ruffing, listen: None of their hits amounted to anything more than a single, and between the second and ninth inning they were held to one solitary safety—Travis' single with two out in the seventh. Taft Wright managed to reach third base in the first inning, but against Ruffing thereafter the Nats weren't able to move a man to second much less score a run.

The Others Superfluous.

Of course, there was that little matter of seven runs by the Yankees which helped Ruffing to beat the Nats, but in the light of the big fellow's performance, every Yankee run after the one that occurred in the second inning was as superfluous as another birth in China.

Ancient Elon Hogsett was the losing pitcher, but there was nothing downright disgraceful about his pitching. The old sidewheeler gave up only 7 hits to the Yankees before Pete Appleton relieved him in the eighth inning and clinched the game for New York by pitching a two-bagger to Frank Crosetti with the bases full.

President Newbold Morris, of the New York City Council, delayed the Nats' defeat for 15 minutes. In fact, he delayed the entire program of ceremonies for the opening game. Delayed in traffic en route to the stadium, Councilman Newbold left players of both teams and Managers McCarthy and Harris stranded under the centerfield flagpole.

Arrives Amid Boos.

He arrived finally, behind a police escort and amid a loud chorus of boos from the bleacherites. It was a very much embarrassed official party that paraded on to the field amid the raspberries of the impatient fans, and when Councilman Morris rose to throw out the first ball there were loud mutterings to the effect that Councilman Morris be thrown out.

But eventually the game started and the Yankees began to score runs. They scored one in the second inning after Bill Dickey singled to right and Hoag walked. Selkirk drove a single to left and Johnny Stone muffed the ball on the hop, the slow-footed Dickey scoring.

They made it 2-0 in the fourth when Hogsett forgot that no passes are issued on opening day and issued a pass to Hoag. Selkirk's single moved Hoag to third and young Joe Gordon's fly to Stone drove him home.

The fifth inning was Hogsett's worst. He pitched singles to Crosetti and Powell and then he hit Gehrig on the thigh to fill the bases. One run scored while Dickey was hitting into a force play and Hoag singled to left to drive Powell home. That made it 4-0.

The need of a pinch-hitter forced Hogsett out in the eighth and in came Pete Appleton to run into a three-run storm. The Yankees filled the bases against him before he could get anybody out. Hoag beat out a dribbler down the third base line, Selkirk walked and Buddy Lewis made a damaging muff on Appleton's throw to third after the pitcher had picked up Gordon's attempted sacrifice. Appleton fanned Ruffing in this crisis, but Crosetti whacked a line-drive two-bagger to left center and three of his pals came stamping home.

The Nats threatened mildly with two out in the first inning, with Taft Wright and Zeke Bonura rapping out singles, but Stone was no help. And thereafter three Yankee double plays choked off any idea the Nats had of scoring any runs. Only 26 batters faced Ruffing in the last eight innings.

Pirates Beat Reds, 7 to 4; Win Fourth

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, April 22.—The Pittsburgh Pirates warmed the spirits of 20,500 opening day fans today by whipping Cincinnati, 7 to 4, for their fourth straight National League triumph and running their unbroken string of victories over the Reds at Forbes Field to 19.

Chubby Red Lucas, a former Red, was credited with the victory, although Big Russ Bauers went to his rescue in the eighth. Lucas hasn't lost to Cincinnati since coming to Pittsburgh in 1934.

Ival Goodman's triple in the second after two mates had singled put the Reds two runs ahead. Todd's long triple and a sacrifice fly gave Pittsburgh one in the same frame and they clinched the game in the next stanza with four markers counted after the Waner brothers walked and Suhr, Todd, Brubaker and Young singled in succession.

Cards Win First Game, Defeat Cubs

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, April 22.—The St. Louis Cardinals rallied for four runs in the ninth inning today to defeat Chicago's Cubs, 6 to 5, and score their first victory in four starts this season.

The Cubs were leading, 5 to 2, going into the ninth when an error placed Owen on base and then Bill Lee weakened. Pinch-hitter Max Bucher singled, Stu Martin walked and Enos Slaughter followed with a triple. Bob Logan replaced Lee in time to drop Collins' throw on Johnny Mize's grounder and Slaughter scored the winning run.

Lon Warneke started for the Cards and was removed for a pinch-hitter after allowing seven hits in six innings, including Joe Marty's homer in the second and his triple with the bases filled in the third. Ray Harrell pitched the seventh and eighth for the Cards and Guy Bush stopped the Cubs in the ninth.

54,500 Fans See Indians Beat Tigers

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, April 22.—Playing before a record Detroit crowd of 54,500, the Detroit Tigers lost their opening home game of the American League season to the Cleveland Indians, 4 to 3, today.

Mel Harder went the route for the Indians, allowing eight hits. Two errors that figured in the Detroit scoring kept Harder from getting a shut-out.

Cleveland got five of its six hits and all of its runs off Tommy Bridges, who toiled the first four innings for Detroit.

Lynwood (Schoolboy) Rowe, who had not pitched a major league game in almost a year, relieved Bridges in the fifth with two men on and none out, checking the Indians the rest of the way. Ken Keltner got the only hit off Rowe when he singled after two were out in the sixth. Rowe's performance indicated definitely that the arm ailment that kept him idle almost all of last season has been cured.

A triple, a walk, a put-out, a single and a wild pitch gave the Indians two runs in the second inning, and the Tigers tied it in the fourth with a triple, an error and a single.

Harder started Celeveland's winning rally in the fifth with a double, moved to third on Lyn Lary's single and scored on Bruce Campbell's single. Rowe entered the game at this point. Sammy Hale lined to left, Lary scoring. Then Julius Solters hit into a double play.

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, April 22.—The Chicago White Sox and the St. Louis Browns battled through 13 innings today before the Sox got the run needed to win, 4 to 3, and spoil the home opening of Gabby Street's team.

And it was Pitcher Clint Brown, who relieved Thornton Lee in the eighth, who started the rally that brought victory. Brown doubled to open the thirteenth. Minton Hayes flied to Ethan, Allen. Jack Knott, the Browns' pitcher, tossed out Mike Kreevich, Brown moving to third. Then Henry Steinbacher singled Brown home.

Harper Charges P.G.A., Is Unfair

Portsmouth, Va., April 22 (AP).—Chandler Harper, golf pro at the Portsmouth Country Club, who was ruled ineligible to compete in the mid-Atlantic tournament at Hampton this week-end, asserted today his application had been treated unfairly by the Professional Golfers Association.

Harper said his application for membership in the P. G. A., filed three years ago, was seconded by Bobby Cruickshank and Tony Manero, well-known pros.

It'll Be Baseball Night at the Fights Monday

By Lewis F. Atchison.

A publicity plot, hatched in Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn's busy bonnet, will be placed in operation Monday night when Bobby Pacho comes to blows with Werther Arcelli at the Arena. The evening will be called baseball night.

Ahearn, puffing profusely from three laps around the hat rack in his shirts, socks and shorts emporium, denied it was being christened as such because there will be plenty of pitching and catching by the combatants, and maybe a couple of errors by the judges.

"All the regulars of the Boston and Washington teams will be invited," he said, "And so we figured it would be a good idea to call it that."

"You mean you're going to let all those guys in free?"

"Oh, no," cried M. Ahearn, gulping desperately and leaning on his shirt display case for support. "We can't do that. But, listen, just say it's gonna be baseball night and let it go at that."

Accordingly to the roly-poly major domo, Pacho, the merry Mexican, was quite a ball player a few years ago, and played second base for a club in his native Mexico City. As proof of this Charley Johnston, his manager, was to have photos made of the fighter posing with young Mel Almada, of the Senators, yesterday in New York. We'll have the proofs later.

Both Pacho and Arcelli are training in Gotham, and will arrive hear early Monday morning ready for hostilities. It is alleged to be a grudge match, as Pacho is hankering for a victory to atone for the decis

Ball, Johnson Win Prize in Pro-Amateur

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.
A Staff Correspondent.

Old Point Comfort, Va., April 22. Errie Ball, English-born Charlottesville professional, and O. McKay Johnson, Chamberlin Club champion won the net prize in the pro-amateur event here today on the eve of the Middle Atlantic P. G. A. championship with a 64, and tied a Washington duo, Cliff Spencer and Volney Burnett, for the Gross award with 67.

A driving rainstorm marred the event, only a few teams competing and many of the 30-odd contestants failed to venture on the course. Bobby Cruickshank, Richmond's favored entrant, at odds of 2 to 1, played only three holes.

Ball and his partner were out in 33 and back in 31 for the winning net score, that bested a Winchester duo, pro Rut Coffey and Carl Campbell, by two strokes. The Gross trophy was apparently won by Spencer and Burnett, who, between them, hold the Maryland State Open and Amateur crowns, with their 67, but Ball and his partner, last ones to finish, tied it with a par on the last hole.

Isaacs, Stoner Card, 67.

Jack Isaacs and Maj. Rex Stoner, of Langley Field, had a net score of 67, while Al Houghton, host pro, was in the money, with two partners, Russ Hollebaugh and Levi Yoder, of Kenwood, with 69 and 70.

Ball had an individual round of 70 today that was a stroke better than 73s by Benny Loving, Coffey, Houghton and Isaacs. Spencer, after picking up on the fourth hole, played the last ten in 3 under par.

The Virginia delegation is favored in the title play starting tomorrow, with Cruikshank, Houghton, Ball and Isaacs all heavily backed and Coffee in the role of dark horse.

The Washington entrants are headed defending Champion Leo Walper, Cliff Spencer and Loving, while Mel Shorey, Tony Sylvester, Al Treder, Gene Larkin and Bob Barnett will all play.

Three of the Capital City's entrants that finished in the money here last year—Wiffy Cox, Roland Mackenzie and George Diffenbaugh, will not play for various reasons.

Odds Favor Cruikshank.

The odds of 2 to 1 on Cruikshank are the lowest quoted, with Houghton next at 3 to 1. Walper is at the high odds for a defending titleholder of 10 to 1.

Cruikshank will play with Bob Barnett, while Treder and Shorey play together, Walper with Houghton, Larkin with Ed Koehler, of Quantico, Loving and Jack Isaacs, Spencer with Baltimore's favored entry, Johnny Bass, former professional here, and Sylvester and Tommy Ryan.

Thirty-six holes will be played tomorrow and a gold medal going to the winners.

The course is in fine shape, though the two-day rain may make it an open tourney, with the "mudders" having the advantage.

Pairings for first round Middle Atlantic P. G. A.:

Three Pin Marks Set at Arcadia

Two league records and an all-time mark fell in the Interstate Commerce Commission bowling loop last night at Arcadia. Paul McMillan, Certificates ace celebrated the final night of the season by accounting for two new standards.

McMillan rolled 163 to set a league record for a single game and then smashed the all-time mark by his 422 set. The other new mark was Mimeograph's 617 set. The same team was high team scorer with 1,633.

George Washington, Western Tie, 3 to 3

In a practice game played at Alexandria yesterday, Western and George Washington battled to a 3-to-3 tie. Toby Bright was brilliant during his six innings on the mound, holding the home team to no runs.

The Presidents nipped Nance, Western pitcher, who relieved Bright, for three runs in the seventh on a double, two singles and an error. Porter, G. W. hurler, did not allow an earned run.

3-Run Rally Enables Judgemen to Erase State's 7-6 Lead.

By Jack Munhall.

Georgetown's Joe Keegin had the final say in a thrilling battle of home runs on the Hoya field yesterday, smashing a two-run circuit blow in the eighth inning to transfor... a 7-6 Penn State lead into the Hoyas' ninteenth straight intercollegiate victory. The score was 9-7.

More than 1,500 fans, including several University of Maryland scouts, watched the former Eastern High catcher deposit a 3 and 2 pitch far over the leftfield embankment to score Capt. Johnny Cavadine ahead of him.

Keegin's mighty poke, his only hit, was the fourth homer in a see-saw game which saw the Nittany Lion flay Mike Petroskey for three round-trippers before dropping its second successive game to a local team.

Uphill Fight.

But it was a hard-fighting and game Lion that Georgetown beat yesterday. Handicapped by their own poor fielding and a pair of double plays by Georgetown's new infield combination, the Pennsylvanians fought uphill all the way after Georgetown picked up four counters in the first inning and added two more in the second.

The Lions pecked away at Petroskey without success in the first three innings, but scored simply and suddenly in the fourth when Joe Adessa, big rightfielder, slammed the first of two homers to right-centerfield. They reduced Georgetown's lead to 6-2 in the fifth on a triple and a single, and then really went to work in the eighth to rush across five markers and take the lead for the first time.

An error by Joe Mellendeck, making his initial start as the Hoyas' shortstop, started the trouble, but what followed was beyond the power of any infielder to stop. Because, after the second batter had singled, big Adessa cleaned up the sacks with his second homer, a vicious sock to the leftfield, and Ray Truhn duplicated the stunt a moment later with one aboard.

One Run Looks Big.

And this one-run margin looked mighty large to Georgetown, for the Hoyas were having little success with the sweeping curves of Capt. Ben Simoncelli, State's chunky southpaw. After his disastrous start, Simoncelli had straightened out masterfully, and when Cavaline stepped to the plate in the eighth, he was seeking Georgetown's first hit since the third inning.

But, as we said, Cavadine responded with a clean single to center, and Keegin knocked that 3-and-2 pitch somewhere in Rock Creek Park to revive the dinner appetites of all the good Hoyamen. Georgetown's ninth run was made on Mellendeck's fluke double and Petroskey's single.

Petrosky, although in trouble most of the way, pitched a smart game and was credited with his eleventh straight victory. He fanned six and allowed no one to walk.

Each side made 11 hits.

Kuhel Snaps Fielding Record

St. Louis, April 22 (AP).—Two major league fielding records were bettered and another was equalled today in the 13-inning battle between the Browns and the Chicago White Sox here.

By accepting 23 chances (22 putouts and one assist), Joe Kuhel, of the White Sox surpassed by one the previous high for total chances accepted by a first baseman in a single game. The listed mark is 22, set by Bill O'Brien, of Washington, back in 1888 and equalled eight times, most recently by Jack Burns of the Browns in 1931.

Don Heffner, the second sacker the Browns imported recently from the New York Yankees, made 12 assists during the game, bettering by 1 the listed mark, which was set by Fred Dunlap, of Cleveland, in 1882, and since equalled several times.

Kuhel's 22 putouts equalled the record in that department for first basemen.

D. C. Youth Wins Third Jump Place

Mercer Fadely, 12, Takes Honors in Events at Arlington Hall.

Mercer Fadeley, son of the well-known Washington horseman, Fenton Fadeley, performed like a grown-up yesterday at Arlington Hall to take third place in the open jumping class event of the third annual intercollegiate show held at the school.

Master Fadeley, just 12 years of age, was in competition with riders a good deal older than he, but handled his mount, Headrock, well enough to rate his position.

Rain threatened to ruin yesterday's opening events of the show but Fritz Kleemann, major domo of the event, held three of the events indoors then took the performers to the outdoor arena.

Gwen Rogers, on Royal Barton, won the advanced student horsemanship class, with Blair Rogers, on Dahnen, second, and Nancy Rucker, on So Long, third. All three are members of the Arlington Hall team.

The horsemanship class for intermediates was taken by Marjory Stroat, on Gone With the Wind, with Betty Johnson, on So Long, second, and Thelma Farmer, on King Rock, third.

Aerflight, ridden by Cadet Hogan, of the Pennsylvania Military Academy, took first in the open jumping class. Second was Nancy Rucker, of Arlington Hall, on So Long, and third was Master Fadeley.

The Arlington Hall No. 1 Hunt Team, composed of Gwen Rogers, on Royal Barton; Sally Seward, on Fidelio, and Carol Norton, on King Rock, won the junior hunt team event.

The show continues this morning and this afternoon.

STUDENT HORSEMANSHIP, ADVANCED—Won by Rogers on Royal Barton; second Blair Rogers on Dahnen; third, Nancy Rucker on So Long; fourth, Sally Seward, on Rio Rita.

HORSEMANSHIP FOR INTERMEDIATES—Won by Marjory Stroat on Gone With the Wind; second, Betty Johnson on So Long; 3, Thelma Farmer, on King Rock; fourth, Shirley Stimson on Vanda.

OPEN JUMPING CLASS, FROM ALL SCHOOLS—Won by Aerflight, ridden by Cadet Hogan, Pennsylvania Military Academy; second, So Long, ridden by Nancy Rucker, Arlington Hall; third, Headrock, by Mercer Fadeley; third, white Star, PMA.

Trio of Virginia Racers Shines at Jamaica Oval

Sunned, Sunport and Sunphantom, Virginia-bred turf stars, finished in the order named to divide the purse money following the running of the featured Melville Handicap at Jamaica yesterday.

The winner was sired by Ed Crump, who does stallion duty at Middleburg. Genie and Sun Briar, respectively, are the sires of the place and show horses. Both stallions, owned by Willis Sharpe Kilmer, are holding court at Newmarket, Va. Closing prices in the wagering stalls would indicate all were equal choices with the betting fraternity. Sunned covered the 6-furlong distance in 1:13.

Cards and Terps to Be Hosts In Athletic Competition Today

By Jack Munhall.

The most attractive collegiate sports card of the spring season unfolds on two fronts this afternoon when Maryland teams will be host to three warm rivals at College Park and Catholic University will entertain two local foes in a triangular track meet at C. U. stadium.

At College Park, where the Terp teams will hold something of a field day, it promises to be just that—a field day—for the visiting teams, although anything is liable to break loose when the Old Liners meet undefeated Georgetown in baseball, St. John's of Annapolis in lacrosse, and Western Maryland in tennis.

Granting that the lacrosse tilt, which brings together two tens ambitious of national honors, is particularly significant, most of the interest of an expected capacity crowd will be in the diamond battle which renews Washington's most colorful rivalry.

Despite Maryland's recent string of losses, Georgetown will be little more than a slight favorite to beat the Terps for the third straight time. This statement may elicit wholesale surprise but it seems well founded when two or three factors are considered.

In the first place, Burt Shipley's Old Liners have a good college ball club, much stronger than a record of five victories and five setbacks would hint. Secondly, the Terps appear better conditioned than the Hoyas because they have played seven more contests and because rains which left the Hoya field soggy have canceled several practices.

A third puzzling angle and the one which is perhaps the most significant revolves about the best hitters of both teams, who are not hitting and who can be expected to do so anytime now. This group includes Smitty Nau, Harry Bassin, of Georgetown, and Mike Surgent and Bill Bryant, of Maryland. Nau, who compiled a .364 record last year, currently is boasting a .091 mark. Similarly, Bryant who slugged at a .400 pace for the Terps last season is hitting only .162.

The batteries for Georgetown will be Hank Bertrand, pitching, and Joe Keegin, catching; for Maryland, either Charley Weidinger or Lefty Wood, pitching and Joe Crisafulli or Robert Burns, catching.

The Maryland-St. John's lacrosse match will find the Terps up against the last collegiate team to defeat them since 1935, since which time 19 straight triumphs have been registered. Maryland's chance for a victory today does not appear bright, for the Johnnies recently in the season's biggest upset beat Mount Washington 9-5, which earlier this season nipped Maryland, 6-4.

Moving over to C. U., where the first intra-city track of the outdoor season is to be held, a real seesaw battle for points looms since the Cards, American and Gallaudet appear very well-matched. Both A. U. and the Blues have more than usual strength in the field events and several capable sprinters as well. So the Cards, who have dominated previous engagements of the "Big Three," apparently are facing a tough afternoon.

The Maryland-Green Terror tennis match should find the unbeaten Terps notching their third straight victory. Led by Albert Ritzenberg, a former Central High star, Maryland has a very formidable band of racquet wielders.

King's Setter Wins Trials

Smoke Signal Held Best at Germantown.

By Bill Ackerman.

Despite occasional showers and a raw cold, the ninth brace of the All-Ages Stakes of the seventeenth annual field trials got underway yesterday afternoon on the wide expanse which is Walter Johnson's Germantown home.

The weather prediction of "fair" today promised to make the closing heats of the All-Age Stakes and the Shotoing Dog faster and more colorful.

Preston King and Dr. Elmer E. Huffer, judging, in the place of Senator Smathers, of Atlantic City, called unexpectedly to North Carolina, placed the beautiful white and black pointer dog, Smoke Signal, first; Shore's Inbred Sport, second, and Doc's Chat, third.

J. W. King, Richmond, Va., attorney, and owner of Smoke Signal, has long been a breeder of setters. Running them altogether during the years he has been secretary of the Richmond Club. It was not until he received this short-haired pup, as a gift, that the pointer had a chance in his affections. Now they surely must rank first, for this little more than a year old pup has placed first five times in five starts.

Many thought Shore's Inbred Sport ran better but the judges evidently thought Smoke Signal the best hunter, for they placed the dog of Thomas H. Hunt, of Baltimore, Md., second. In the puppy events the judges don't expect finished work, but they do expect the willingness to hunt.

Fifteen entries in the Derby, 26 in the All-Age and 24 in the Shooting Dogs Stakes, a total of 65, made the largest entry list for the spring trials the National Capital Field Trial Club has had in several years.

There are many past winners of Shooting Dogs running today, and it is bound to show some real class. Just Jim, the liver-and-white pointer which took this stake last spring, is on hand and in good shape, as are Dr. Huffer's Jackson, winner over many of the finest dogs in the country; Rex's Star, Skipper of Caradoc, Umpires Buddy B. Raps Ripsaw Lady, Broadway Bill, and many others—every one of them to be considered in the final analysis.

Who's Kenwood Pro? George Diffenbaugh Denies Taking Job

Roanoke, Va., April 22 (AP).—George Diffenbaugh, who recently came to Roanoke Country Club as golf professional, tonight denied he had signed or agreed to sign a contract with Kenwood Golf and Country Club in Washington.

It was revealed that Diffenbaugh had received an offer from the club but stated he had made no decision in the matter.

An announiement from the grounds committee of Roanoke Country Club made it plain Diffenbaugh would be at the club tomorrow. It also stated that the professional "was engaged by the local club last month under an agreement effective to April 1, 1939."

No further comment was forthcoming from either Diffenbaugh or the club.

Navy, Lion Crews Meet On Harlem

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, April 22.—Each unbeaten in opening races of the season last Saturday, the flotillas of Navy and Columbia will cross oars tomorrow afternoon on the gummy Harlem River. Interest has been running high in this twenty-first clash between the Lions and their rivals from the Severn and good weather should blacken the Speedway seawall with people over the entire 1¾-miles course by the time the opening freshman heavyweight race gets under way at 1 p. m.

Columbia, despite a four-race sweep over Manhattan and Rutgers on the Harlem last week, is yet to be thoroughly tested. The big, experienced Navy crew is coming to town with a varsity and jayvee victory over Princeton, and according to observers, the Middies have a wealth of untouched power in their blades. Columbia rooters think the Light Blue crews are hot and ready to go this year, but they'll have to be as hot as the prerace bonfires which blazed on South Field tonight if the Lions expect to take Navy into camp.

Navy, unbeaten in the shorter races last year and second in the Poughkeepsie classic, is bigger and stronger than ever. The Middies' varsity boat will average 180 pounds in weight and 6 feet 2 inches in height for each oarsman. It will be stroked by Neal Almgren, the heaviest member of the crew. Tom Walker, who stroked the Middies to victory over Princeton last week, has been shifted by Coach Buck Walsh to bow. The move is expected to add weight and strength in the stern of the Navy boat.

George Whiteside, who goes to No. 7, is the next heaviest oarsman in the shell. Whiteside weighs 182 pounds, 2 less than Almgren.

Columbia's varsity will be stroked by rangy Hank Remmer, of Oakdale, Long Island, a towering 6 foot 4 inch 180-pounder. The Light Blue shell will row tomorrow as it rowed against Rutgers and Manhattan. Bob Martin will be in the bow and Jimmy McHaney, of Little Rock, Ark., will be at the tiller ropes.

Capital Girl Sweeps Play

Helen Dettweiler Wins in Miller Tourney.

Helen Dettweiler scored a double victory in the Phyllis Keeler Miller Memorial invitation golf tournament yesterday at the Washington Golf and Country, winning both the low gross and low net.

Forced by tourney rules to choose one or the other of the prizes, Blond Helen selected the net trophy by virtue of her 77. She won low gross with 79, one stroke under her previous best on the Virginia course.

Since Miss Dettweiler's gross score was discredited because of her choice, Mrs. Betty Meckley, Indian Spring, and Miss Marian Brown, of the Manor, will play off their tie for first gross, 83.

Miss Dettweiler, Cons.	79	2	—77
Miss M. Brown, Manor	83	—	78
Mrs. J. J. Johnson, A. & N.	89	11	—78

Hayes' Slide Beats the Throw

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Speary Beats Feary in Guild Ring Show Feature at Arena

The Washington Newspaper Guild hired a hall last night, or rather borrowed Joe Turner's Arena, and gave boxing fans a topnotch amateur boxing program that saw Willie Speary, National A. A. U. champion, rap his way to a clean-cut decision over Willie Feary in the feature bout.

Approximately 1,000 fans saw the blows struck for the press, and went their way satisfied with the program. There were no knockouts, but action never lagged and there were several knockdowns.

The eagerly anticipated meeting between Leo Katalinas, Catholic University heavyweight, and Leo Miller, Fort Myer's Third Corps Area champion, failed to materialize because of an injury Miller suffered boxing Thursday night, but the quality of the other bouts atoned for their absence.

Packs Too Many Guns.

Speary carried too many guns for the District boy, and fired from every conceivable angle. He shook up Tapp with four smashing right-hand shots to the head, but couldn't put him on the floor. Tapp, on the other hand, stunned the Pennsylvanian with a few surprisingly potent rights to the side of his head, and waged a smart, but futile fight.

Leo Stoll, Baltimore light-heavyweight champion, gave the most courageous exhibition of the evening, carrying the fight to Bill Nolan, District A. A. U. titleholder, after going down three times in the first round and again in the second from long rights to the head. He whacked Nolan with a series of stiff left hooks that drew the claret, but was in obviously too poor condition to stand up under Nolan's punching.

Ralph Harris, District A. A. U. and Third Corps middleweight title winner, punched his way to a unanimous decision over Marion Barnes—almost putting him away in the third. Barnes, a clever defensive ringman, failed to feaze the Fort Belvoir belter.

Colored Boys Entertain.

A couple of sepia sockers, Bill Banks and Jimmy Montgomery, manufactured one of the program's best bouts, Banks winning a close decision. Banks' ring generalship was a trifle too clever, and his punching a bit too stiff for the 15-year-old Montgomery, but the latter was game to the core and they had the audience in an uproar.

In the other bouts, Ray Brown, 65 pounds, drew with Emil de Toto; Bernie Morris, 122, earned a close verdict over Tony de Toto; Delton Parker, Cumberland, 128, outpointed Harry Sunderland, Baltimore, 131, and Joe Distrito drew with his brother Jimmy (50 pounds, soaking wet) in an exhibition.

'Y' Matmen Lead A. A. U. Tourney

Placing seven men in the finals, the Y. M. C. A. wrestling team took a long lead in the annual District A. A. U. tournament last night at Gallaudet College. The University of Maryland garnered three places, the host team two, and Jewish Community Center one. Finals are scheduled tonight at Gallaudet, starting at 8 o'clock.

Government Nines Open Race Today

By Perry Wilkinson.

The United States Government Baseball League will launch its 1938 season today, when the Federal Bureau of Investigation nine meets the Naval Air Station team at 2:30 p. m. on the East Ellipse diamond.

Shortly before the game, a parade, headed by the United States Navy Band and the Metropolitan Police Boys Club Band, will march to the home plate for the flag-raising ceremonies. High Government officials will take part in the pregame activities.

Attorney General Homer S. Cummings, Admiral George T. Pettengill, J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the G-men; Judge Edward M. Curran, president of the Government League; Commissioner Walter H. Maloney, president of the National Capital Amateur Baseball Association, and Capt. J. D. Price, commander of the Naval Air Station, will be on hand for the opener.

Jim Tennant, sce F. B. I. hurler, will oppose Johnny Garrison, choice selection of the air-minded lads. Stands for the officials and fans have been erected at the East Ellipse field.

Bill Coyle, well known sports commentator, will broadcast a play by play description over Station WMAL.

The 26 teams from 5 different leagues—United States Government, Departmental, Herald Government, Commercial and Industrial—will be competing for the honor of meeting the best amateur squads of the United States. The local winner, to be selected from the champions of each league in a "double knock-out" series, each team being eliminated after losing two games, will be sent to Pittsburgh to enter the annual tournament that decides the national sandlot championship.

Sonny Workman Pilots Battle Jack to Neck Victory in Pagebrook

Walter Haight

I'm not going in the horse selling business on a big scale, but I would like to assist my friend, Dudley Gaskins, of Middleburg, Va. Dudley has two fillies, both untried in racing, but of promising breeding that he would like to exchange for some cash, bucks, green ones, onions or whatever is your favorite expression for United States currency. These young mares are 3 and 4 years old, and both are by Abbots Nymph out of Maybodine.

HAIGHT.

The sire was imported to this country, and Gaskins was one of his handlers when he stood at the Cruden Farm in Virginia. Gaskins sold Big Sally, the mother of High Velocity, Droll Story and Little Sally, to H. P. Metcalf. If you are interested in his fillies he can be reached by mail at Middleburg, Va.

It looks as though I should wait for Charles Town and play J. B. Belk's Madame Walter and Mr. Walter. The Charlottesville owner also will race Wise Sister, Janstar and Wayout at the West Virginia track.

John A. Manfuso, Washington owner of Aneroid, is enthusiastic about a baby colt that arrived on Allen Clark's farm near Clarksville, Md. The youngster is by Mowlee, Clark's up-and-coming stud representative, and out of En Passant. Manfuso intends to name him Accidental, although the whole thing was planned.

The Preakness Week Association, organized three years ago to popularize and nationalize the Preakness, historic feature of Maryland's racing season, will hold the third annual Preakness Ball at the Fifth Regiment Armory the evening of the race—Saturday, May 14.

This announcement was made by Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, chairman of the Preakness Week Association and vice president of the Maryland Jockey Club, owner of the Pimlico Race Track.

Following the custom of previous years, the ball will climax a series of events scheduled for Preakness Week, May 9 to 14. However, the festivities, according to Mr. Vanderbilt, will be staged on a more elaborate scale than in previous years. The ball itself will be more glamorous, more colorful and more spectacular than ever.

Holiday spirit prevails in Baltimore on Preakness Day, just as in Louisville on Derby Day and in New Orleans during the Mardi Gras. After the Preakness winner has flashed under the wire, the victory is celebrated with appropriate ceremonies at the Preakness Ball. Owners of famous racing stables, well-known turf writers and other figures prominently connected with the Sport of Kings join hands with Maryland's hunting set and racing enthusiasts to tell and retell the story of America's richest race for 3-year-olds.

Tentative plans for the Preakness frolic in Baltimore's spacious exhibition hall call for dancing from 10 p. m. to 4 a. m., with the pageantry connected with the customary crowning of the Preakness Queen commencing early in the evening. The queen will be surrounded by her entire court, consisting of princesses, duchesses and other attendants, all of whom will be selected from representative families of Maryland. Beauty and charm will be major requisites for members of the Preakness Court.

The Preakness Ball was started three years ago as an integral part of Preakness Week activities. It was planned as a unique and outstanding social event with an underlying civic significance in keeping with the historic importance of this racing classic. Last year the Preakness Week Association was incorporated as a nonprofit organization to nationalize the Preakness as one of Maryland's major civic events.

$114 Shot Wins Fourth On Program

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Have de Grace, Md., April 22.—Monetary and racing thrills teamed to make this an exciting day at the races for a crowd of 9,000. A horse named Cornwallis refused to surrender in the fourth race and staged a one-horse daily double, paying the backers of the mutuel "field" a $114.30 mutuel. He won the race in a photo finish with Riding High, a favorite, and proved the second winner of the day for Apprentice Jockey M. Berger.

The closest finish of the program, however, was that of the third race when Eddie Smith and Sonny Workman, both Northeast Washington boys who learned to ride at the Benning track, hooked up in a duel to the wire. Smith proved the winner with James A., the odds-on favorite. Workman, however, overcame poor racing luck at the start to bring Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt's Company Halt into the battle and he and his mount put up a game fight. James A. was played from Maine to Florida and westward to California and paid a $3.20 mutuel.

Workman had two winning mounts for the day. After taking the opener with Haunted House, he came back to ride Battle Jack, the shortest priced winner of the meeting at $2.80, to victory in the Pagebrook Purse, the feature event. The J. W. Y. Martin colt, thought to be the surest winner of the day, had to huff and puff for all he was worth in the final stages to win by a neck from E. R. Bradley's Bar Fly. Teddy Weed, owned by the Tomara Stable, was beaten a neck for second money.

Battle Jack, considered Preakness timber following his recent brilliant sprint victory, had to be aided by all the riding ability of Workman. He was in third position most of the way and entering the stretch saved much ground to get to the front. However, Bar Fly and Teddy Weed, not named for the Preakness, refused to give in to Battle Jack without a struggle. Workman had to call on his whip to persuade the colt that he wanted to win.

Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt won a purse but he lost a horse in the first race. Haunted House, a son of Flying Ebony, turned on the heat in the final stages to reach the wire a neck in advance of Timetta, a paddock tip, in the first race. Both were first-time starters. Third money in the field of seven juveniles went to Walli. Haunted House paid a substantial $10.10 mutuel. Mrs. A. J. Abel thought enough of the colt to place a certified check for $2,000 in the claiming box and her stableman led the colt away after the race.

Jadaan, one-time half miler who seldom runs a bad race these days while earning his way on major tracks, made good for the favorite players in the second race. The 6-year-old gelding came from off the leaders to take the decision Irene's Bob with Idle Elf taking the show money. Apprentice Jockey M. Berger did the riding and Jadaan produced a $3.60 mutuel.

Popo, an 8-year-old gelding, found this track more to his liking than Bowie, and won the sixth race, defeating Itsie Bitsie by a head. The camera was brought into play for some reason. Shot and Shell, a field horse, was third in the group of 11 cheap platers. Popo, ridden by Eddie Kilgore, an apprentice, paid $13.30.

Tiempo, owned by Mrs. H. Young and trained by her husband, won the day's finale at a $38.70 mutuel, downing Dian by a length and a half. Third money went to Mariato.

Another Close Finish at Havre de Grace Track

Two-dollar mutuels paid—JADAAN, $3.60, $2.50, $2.50; IRENE'S BOB, $3.60, $3.60; IDLE ELF, $4.40.

JADAAN worked his way up on outside gradually, rallied nicely to drive in stretch and wore down IRENE'S BOB in closing sixteenth. IRENE'S BOB, rushed to contention leaving backstretch, shook off NATHAN HALE to get to front and continued willingly, but was no match for winner. IDLE ELF saved ground throughout.

Daily Double, Haunted House and Jadaan, Paid $14.50.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000. For maiden 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:30. Off 3:33. Winner, Mrs. E. B. Ohlker's br. g. (5), by Boo—Grace E. Trained by R. L. Hanna. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:14 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—JAMES A, $3.20, $2.80, $2.60; COMPANY HALT, $5.80, $4.80; SKAGERRAK, $5.50.

JAMES A. rated along with early pace of DINNER JACKET, took slight lead when placed to drive and, under hard drive, barely lasted to take photo decision. COMPANY HALT, off slowly, was sent to contention with rush, rallied to intermittent punishment to engage JAMES A. and hung in final strides. SKAGERRAK went wide at final turn and closed with a rush on outside.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward (Maryland bred). Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:05. Off 4:08. Winner, J. F. C. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CORNWALLIS (field), $114.30, $16.60, $6.70; RIDING HIGH, $3.10, $2.80; MR. DUNCANNON, $11.70.

CORNWALLIS, forwardly placed from start, rallied to punishment in stretch and was up in concluding strides, RIDING HIGH disposed of MR. DUNCANNON entering stretch to open lead, but weakened at the end. FYAN was weakly handled and closed some ground. STORY TIME went in the air at break and made up ground in final stages.

FIFTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000. The Pagebrook. For 3-year-olds. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:36. Off 4:40. Winner, J. W. Y. Martin's ch. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BATTLE JACK, $2.80, $2.50, $2.10; BAR FLY, $4.60, $3.00; TEDDY WEED, $2.90.

BATTLE JACK, steadied along within striking distance of the leaders, ducked through on rail to save much ground and under intermittent punishment held sway to end. BAR FLY, forward factor from break, rallied to drive in stretch and closed with good energy. TEDDY WEED went to front after quarter and weakened slightly in final test.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:10. Off 5:18. Winner, C. Boyle's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—POPO, $13.30, $6.90, $4.80; ITSIE BITSIE, $12.90, $7.20; SHOT AND SHELL (field), $4.10.

POPO, steadied along while within striking distance of the leaders, improved position nearing half pole, and wore down ITSIE BITSIE to win going away. ITSIE BITSIE was sent to front under hustling tactics going to first turn, opened a good lead, but weakened suddenly in final 50 yards. SHOT AND SHELL pressed the pace and held on willingly. JUSTA GAL had speed in spots.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:50. Off 5:50½. Winner, Mrs. E. Keenland Feature Won by Lourdes

Lexington, Ky., April 22 (AP).—Greentree Stable's Lourdes, a sprightly filly by Whichone and Shrine, accounted for today's feature at Keeneland, styled the Crystal Springs purse, in practically a gallop.

Lourdes, ridden by Jockey P. Roberts, was outsider in the small field. She paid $12.80 for $2 and was tabbed the mile and one sixteenth in 1:48.

At the finish of the mile spin, which attracted but four starters, Lourdes was coasting four lengths in front of H. P. Headley's Drift Along, which in turn beat W. E. Smith's Kitty Baker five lengths. Silver Sarah, which finished second to Tiger in the Arkansas Derb, was last three lengths further back.

Dauber to Miss Chesapeake Today

Havre de Grace, Md., April 22 (AP).—Dauber, an outstanding Kentucky Derby candidate, will not run in tomorrow's $15,000 Chesapeake Handicap because of a slow track his owner, William duPont, said today.

Rains last night made the track slow. duPPont said Dauber will be shipped to his farm and then to Kentucky for the Derby.

Horse Doping Defense Charges Off Tax Bill

By the Associated Press

The Board of Tax Appeals said today that Hal Price Headley, of Fayette County, Ky., could deduct from his income tax return costs of defending a criminal prosecution for alleged horse-doping. The board allowed the deduction as an item of business expense, defining his business as breeding horses.

Headley, who was indicted in 1933, won dismissal of the case in 1934 for want of prosecution.

Faint Hopes Seen for Early Business Rise

Federal Spending May Spur Last Quarter, Survey Reports.

New York, April 22.—In its weekly summary of the general business situation, the Standard Statistics Co. says today:

"There is little basis for expecting an upturn in business before the latter part of the year with current prospects in most lines pointing to no more than seasonal improvement, at best, during the current quarter and with the third quarter usually dull.

"It is conceivable that the combination of Government spending (which probably will begin to be felt in the final quarter), reduced inventories in many lines, and increased activities in the automobile industry with the beginning of the 1939 model season will result in at least moderate recovery in the final three months, but whether such a recovery mark the beginning of a sustained upturn is impossible to forecast with any assurance at this time.

"The initial response to the Government's new spending program was a sharp rise in the speculative markets, reflecting the inflationary implications of continued huge Federal deficits and fear that the program would result in a scramble for commodities. However, speculative enthusiasm soon died down when it was realized that the benefits, if any, from this program will not make themselves felt immediately and that industry is still facing a number of major problems which will not be corrected by more monetary manipulations."

Department Store Sales.

Department store sales were 8 per cent higher in the week ended April 16 than in the corresponding week last year, the Federal Reserve Board said yesterday. The board pointed out, however, that the week immediately preceded Easter this year but occurred after Easter last year.

Tobacco Markets.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, Md., April 22.—Maryland—For the past week receipts were 251 hhds., but only a few were inspected and offered for sale. Actual sales reported only one hhd. Ohio—Nothing to report.

Maryland—Due to favorable weather and an early spring, tobacco seed beds have sprouted and the leaves are now about the size of a quarter dollar. Farmers are preparing for a larger crop this year.

French Franc In Wide Break

The franc, which closed yesterday at 3.13¾, sold at 3.04 in the early trading and, except for a slight improvement at midday, it moved steadily downward to close at 3.02½.

Selling centered in Paris and London and intervention by the official control was believed lacking. A number of reasons were given for the decline. Cable advices to banks here cited a remark attributed to a French cabinet member that the franc should be allowed to hit 2.85. Bankers also pointed to the sharp increase in government borrowing from the Bank of France and difficulties surrounding a proposed loan in England.

Most other European currencies showed narrow declines in terms of the dollar. Sterling lost ½ cent.

Wheat Rallies After Drop of 1¼c a Bushel

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, April 22.—Aided by securities upturns and by export purchases of 350,000 bushels from Canada, the Chicago wheat market late today virtually overcame 1¼ cents earlier losses.

Contributing to transient price setbacks was the fact that heavy British export takings appeared at first to have consisted altogether of Australian wheat. An additional depressing factor was that no export business from the United States was in evidence.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were unchanged to ⅝ lower compared with yesterday's finish, May 83⅞@84, July 82@82⅛; corn unchanged to ⅛ higher, May 59½@59⅝, July 61¼; oats unchanged to ¼ up; rye unchanged to ¾ advance, and provisions unchanged to 7 cents bulge.

'Economic Fallacies' Listed by Garrett

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., April 22 (AP).—Paul W. Garrett, director of public relations of General Motors Corporation, in an address today to the convention of the American Association of Advertising Agencies, listed the following as "economic fallacies"

"That industry is a device operating for the unholy benefit of a few economic royalists."

"That business went on a 'sit-down strike' to bring this depression to embarrass the New Deal and to embarrass labor."

"That the way to spread wealth is to divide it, not multiply it."

The Market

Stocks Advance With Trading Over Million; U. S. Bonds Continue Strong.

New York, April 22.—On a turnover of more than a million shares, the largest of the month, stock prices moved forward all along the line. Best prices were reached early in the last hour and were shaded before the close as actively slackened. United States Government bonds again were buoyant. Commodities were mixed. May wheat closed a quarter of a cent lower at 84 cents a bushel. French francs declined sharply, presumably in accordance with the new French government's plan to allow the currency to depreciate.

Stocks were pretty good in most departments. Metals, steels, utilities and low-priced stocks generally were favored. A good many sales of large blocks appeared in the afternoon trading, when prices were at their best, and brokers reported a tendency of shorts to cover. On the surface there was nothing in the news today to suggest any more reason for buying stocks than could have been uncovered yesterday. Just the same, once the market developed into an advance, reasons were brought out. It was said the market had been oversold, that tax revision was inevitable and that Federal spending in one form or another was sure to come, just as sure as it is that the Administration will have to back down on much of its antibusiness activity.

The rise in stocks, which amounted to 1 to 3 points for leading issues, in itself was responsible for the development of certain rumors, rumors which likely as not will make good simply because they sound plausible. For instance, the financial district wondered if the Federal Reserve Board would cut the stock trading margin requirement from 40 per cent to 30 per cent, and at the same time remove the one-eighth of a point differential on short selling. The spreading of that rumor at least proved the point that some persons never get over the idea that public officials ought to act logically.

Bonds Rise Further.

Excitement in the United States Government bond market continued under the announcement of the Treasury's intention to use the gold fund, or part of it at least, for retiring debt and the huge addition to excess reserves. Gains of a quarter of a point or more in Governments were the rule and the revival of gilt edged bonds lifted the expectation of investment firms that new life might be breathed into the dormant capital market for corporation issues. Hopes were increased by the addition to the premium on the Consolidated Edison issue of yesterday.

Rejuvenation of the bond market naturally is giving stock traders pleasure. For one thing they suppose that, as bond yields go down, the tendency to look first to preferred stocks and then to common stocks will increase. For another, if a lively bond market will mean a resumption of new capital issues, some expansion in trade activity likely will ensue. Both markets perhaps were more concerned today with the action of Congress on tax revision than with pump priming.

Forced Loan.

Chile is in default on bonds owed to American investors, although on some issues it seems the service actually has been collected, but the Chileans have discovered a clever plan of using the funds for their own purposes. Thus the Chilean government announces the purchase of half a million dollars worth of locomotives for the Chilean State Railways. Although investors in Baldwin Locomotive Works may, perhaps, get some benefit from the order, it is a bit tough to force American holders of Chilean bonds to become willy-nilly contributors to the rehabilitation of the Chilean government's railways and to the profits of Baldwin. If Chile is to buy American goods on tick, the tick ought to be extended by the sellers of the goods. In this case it isn't even a matter of credit; it is the appropriation for its own use by Chile of funds belonging to American investors in Chilean bonds.

General Motors.

General Motors will publish next Thursday its quarterly profits account. It is said that Motors operated in the black in first quarter, but there is some doubt as to whether the 25 cent dividend was earned. Motor companies are now entering the season of peak sales. This year the heavy buying may be postponed a few weeks. People without any particular means of income will necessarily wait for their Government checks which will be given them a little later as a demonstration of how, in James Roosevelt's new economic program, the national income can be increased.

Steel.

The rise in foreign holdings of Steel common in first quarter reflected the general belief abroad that this country still has the most favorable economic prospects and the least likelihood of being drawn into a war. Meanwhile stock held in margin accounts at the brokerage offices declined moderately, as always happens in a falling market when the margin holder must either put up more money or sell his stock. At such times the fellow who buys stock outright takes it from the margin holder, as happened with Steel in the past three months.

Phelps Dodge.

The unusual activity in Phelps Dodge in the morning trading attracted attention. The coppers as a group were active and strong, but it was assumed some special reason for the dealings in Phelps Dodge could be found. The company was able to make a profit in first quarter even at a reduced scale of operations and should do well should the price of or demand for copper rise.

I. T. T.

The appearance of Phelps Dodge on the tape in 1,000-share lots, one after another in quick succession, suggested accumulation for investment trust account. Something of the sort may have taken place in International Telephone, which has been favorably mentioned around the board rooms recently on the basis of an early ending of the Spanish war. Its low price also gives it popularity with margin traders. Numerous sales of 1,000 shares at a time were reported on the tape, and there was one three-sale run of 1,500, 1,000 and 1,300 shares, all at 8½. American & Foreign Power was another low-priced utility to attract the 1,000-share-lot traders.

New Capital.

The signal success of the Consolidated Edison $80,000,000 issue has done more to bolster the spirits of investment bankers and dealers than anything that has happened in months. Today the bonds were quoted at 102⅝ bid, compared with the offering price of 101¾. Commercial banks from Maine to California were active buyers. They accounted for approximately 70 per cent of the sales numerically. A year ago the banks, completing the final increase in reserve requirements, were unloading bonds in volume. The compelling forces are now just the opposite.

Cotton Crop Biggest But Profit Smaller

The Bureau of Agricultural Economics estimated yesterday that, despite production of the largest cotton crop on record, the growers' income during the 1937 calendar year totaled only $863,970,000, or $41,109,000 less than in the previous year.

Of the 1937 income, cotton fiber brought growers $734,194,000 and cottonseed $129,776,000, the bureau estimated. Cotton sold in 1937 brought an average price of 8.7 cents a pound, the bureau said, compared with 12.2 in 1936.

DuPont Earns 65c Per Share In 1st Quarter

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 22.—The quarterly pamphlet report of E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co. for the first three months of this year showed today consolidated net earnings for the common stock totatled $7,176,571, equal to 65 cents a share, compared with $14,806,572, or $1.34 a share, in the first quarter last year.

Armco Loss.

American Rolling Mill Co. reported first quarter net loss of $197,310 in contrast with net profit of $2,320,916 in the first quarter of 1937, equal to 80 cents a share on the common. The company has plants at Middletown and Zanesville, Ohio, Ashland, N. Y., Butler, Pa. and Kansas City.

Middle West Corporation.

Chicago, April 22 (AP).—Middle West Corporation today reported 1937 consolidated net income of $1,896,107, or 56 cents a share on capital stock, compared with $1,633,350, or 49 cents, in 1936. Corporate net income, not consolidated, amounted to $759,067, or 22 cents a share, compared with $548,743, or 16 cents, in 1936. Middle West, successor to Middle West Utilities, is a public utility holding company at the top of the group of concerns serving more than 2,000 communities.

Montgomery Ward & Co.

President Sewell L. Avery, of Montgomery Ward & Co., told the annual stockholders' meeting today that profits for the first quarter ending April 30, with April estimated, would amount to approximately $2,000,000 after charges and taxes. The net for the first quarter of last year was $3,466,355. March sales declined 11.8 per cent and February 1.8 per cent.

Domestic Finance.

Despite the adverse business conditions existing during the last half of its fiscal year which ended March 31, Domestic Finance Corporation set an all-time high record in net earnings and loans made during the period, according to Arthur Greene, president, in his annual report to stockholders today. Net earnings, after all charges, including provision for Federal income and undistributed profits taxes, amounted to $727,233, equal to $9.44 a share on 77,019 shares of preferred stock outstanding, as against net of $493,708, or $7.34 per share on 67,296 shares in the same period last year, an increase of 47 per cent.

Owens-Illinois.

Toledo, April 22.—At the annual meeting of Owens-Illinois Glass Co. here today, it was announced that net earnings for the 12 months ended March 31 were $7,646,782 compared with $11,046,984.88 for the same period of 1937.

These earnings are equivalent to $2.87 per share on the common shares, which compare with $8.30 per share in the previous year.

Procter & Gamble Co.

Cincinnati, April 22 (AP).—The Procter & Gamble Co. and subsidiaries reported today consolidated net earnings of $2,800,459 for the 3-month period ended March 31, or 40 cents per share on 6,325,087 common shares outstanding. This compared with a record $8,198,490 earned in the same period last year, or $1.26 per share, and $4,340,348, or 65 cents per common share for the preceding quarter.

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London, April 22.—Trading was somewhat more active in today's stock market as new buying of industrials caused prices for this group to move upward. Tobacco and liquor shares were leaders in the upturn and substantial losses were also firm. Motor shares moved irregularly following the disappointing dividend announcement by Ford Ltd. Mining stocks were easier under profit taking sales while bankers remained featureless. Oils headed securities and foreign bonds held steady.

Paris—The bourse closed with an irregular tone. International issues being on the upside. Rentes finished with losses of 40 to 60 centimes and Bank of France issues sold off 55 francs. Industrials were fractionally below Thursday prices.

Liverpool—After selling about a penny higher wheat futures turned easy following lower Winnipeg prices and a sharp decline in Canadian cash premiums. Final prices were off ⅝d to ¼d up. Cotton futures were influenced by the improvement in overseas markets and closed 3 to 4 points advance. Bombay and commission house buying were favorable factors, but speculative interest is still restricted.

C. A. R. Meeting Here Preceded By a Pageant

Huey Children Tap-Dance; Melody and Carl Schiffeler Play.

Dressed in costumes ranging from tiny tuxedos to khaki shirts and blue jeans, several dozen young descendants of Revolutionary War soldiers last night took part in a program prefacing the forty-third annual convention of the Children of the American Revolution, which opens today.

John Tate, jr., 12-year-old Mississipian, wearing a dress suit (rented), acted as master of ceremonies. Standing on the stage of the District of Columbia Red Cross chapter's auditorium, he introduced to the large audience of parents and fellow-members the singers, dancers and actors who comprised the cast of the annual informal stunt night.

Original Music Played.

In the opening number, Virginia and Barbara Ann Huey of the Potomac Society of D. A. R. did a tap dance, accompanied by the Potomac Society's orchestra. Another act which starred Washington members and was received with enthusiasm was a musical composition, "A Pioneer Epic," written and played by Melody and Carl Schiffeler.

And in one of the most elaborate acts, a group from the Eleanor W. Howard Society of Fairfax County showed what would happen had radio been invented in 1787. Participants were Adelaide Brown, as Mme. Europe; Nancy Territt, as Spain; Barbara Field, as England; Ella Fairfax Haar, as Russia; John R. Blake, jr., as Austria, and Miriam Blake, as Columbia. Herbert R. Haar, jr., presided at the hypothetical microphone.

Prizes to Be Given.

The only non-C. A. R. participants were the "Singing Red Men" of Bacone College, Okla., who presented Indian songs and ceremonial dances. The evening ended with a reading by Chairman Tate, who abandoned his tuxedo for the number and appeared in blackface.

The most popular acts, as selected by the audience's applause, will be awarded prizes at today's sessions. Mrs. John Morrison Kerr, of Washington, arranged the program.

The preconvention activities started yesterday morning when the C. A. R. national officers met for breakfast at the Allies Inn to discuss the program. Mrs. John Morrison Kerr, of Washington, presided and introduced Mrs. William H. Pouch, national president of the C. A. R.

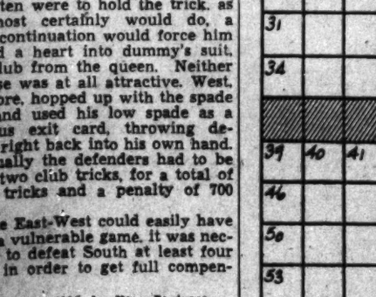
Exit Cards.

Most players fully appreciate the value of entry cards, but not so many have learned that a card of exit is at times just as valuable. Consider the simple means by which East-West earned a top score on the following hand:

East, dealer.
East-West vulnerable.
Match-point duplicate.



The bidding:

East	South	West	North
1 dia.	4 spades	Double	Pass
Pass	Pass

South's preemptive was somewhat too strong, despite the vulnerability conditions and the fact that he could afford a three trick penalty if the opponents could make a vulnerable game.

West opened the diamond seven. Declarer had nothing to lose by attempting the long-shot finesse, therefore ducked in dummy. East won, and returned a diamond. Declarer should have utilized dummy's one sure entry for a lead up to his club king but overlooked this point and woodenly led the singleton trump. East hopped up with the ace and returned the heart queen (which he should have done at the second trick). West took the ace and returned the deuce. Declarer, reading the queen for a singleton, finessed with the ten and East ruffed. East could count from West's return of the heart deuce that declarer was now probably out of hearts. Therefore there was no need to fear dummy's long suit and East properly returned another diamond. Declarer ruffed and led the ten of spades, in the hope that West would hold off with the king. West had other ideas, however. He saw that if he were to duck and the spade ten were to hold the trick, as it almost certainly would do, a spade continuation would force him to lead a heart into dummy's suit, or a club from the queen. Neither of these was at all attractive. West, therefore, hopped up with the spade king and used his low spade as a precious exit card, throwing declarer right back into his own hand. Eventually the defenders had to be given two club tricks, for a total of seven tricks and a penalty of 700 points.

Since East-West could easily have made a vulnerable game, it was necessary to defeat South at least four tricks in order to get full compensation.

Fans Dine School Nine That Lost Every Game

Weatherly, Pa., April 22 (AP).—Local sports fans honored the high school basketball team—even in defeat.

The team lost every game this season, 20 of them. At a community banquet, the fans presented the boys a plaque inscribed with this biblical quotation: "For what shall it profit a man, if he shall gain the world and lose his own soul?"

Bob Burns Says—

There's no question about it bein' more blessed to give than to receive; in fact, I've noticed that when a husband buys somethin' for his wife he makes sure that the blessing is there before he buys it.

I was in a music store the other day when a fella come in and wanted to buy a violin for his wife. I thought to myself, "Well, now, there's an unselfish man." But after a while the storekeeper says "Well, now, do you want a chin rest for the violin?" The fella says "Oh, yes, and give me the most comfortable one you got. The only time my wife's poor chin gets any rest at all is when she's playin' the fiddle."

Pinafore Given Fine Rendition At the Rialto

'Trila by Jury' Performed by Same Able Cast in Local House.

"H. M. S. PINAFORE" or the "Lass That Loved a Sailor." J. Franklyn Viola presents the comic opera by Gilbert and Sullivan in two acts and staged by Frank Moulan.
The Rt. Hon. Sir Joseph Porter, K. C. B., ... Frank Moulan
Capt. Corcoran ..... John Eaton
Dick Deadeye ..... William Danforth
Ralph Rackstraw ...James Montgomery
Bob Bobstay .....Detmar Poppen
Josephine .....Kathryn Reece
Hebe .....Dean Dickens
Mrs. Cripps (Little Buttercup) Anne Yago

FOLLOWED BY

"TRIAL BY JURY." An operetta in one act by Sir W. S. Gilbert and Sir Arthur Sullivan staged by Frank Moulan at the Rialto Theater.
The Learned Judge .....Frank Moulan
The Plaintiff .....Elsie Thiede
The Defendant .....James Montgomery
Counsel for the Plaintiff ...John Eaton
Usher .....William Danforth
Foreman of the Jury ...Detmar Poppen

"H. M. S. Pinafore," opening 60 years ago next month, was well received by the first nighters, but future audiences were not forthcoming and it looked extremely likely that the show would close. Troupers all, the cast took a drastic pay cut and determined not to give up his majesty's ship. Sir Arthur played the music at some of his popular concerts at Coven Garden and as time went on people flocked to the Opera Comique to hear for themselves the charms of Pinafore. One may say that the moon has never failed to rise in after years on a performance of the classic.

As played last night at the Rialto by Mr. Viola's group, it had its accustomed joys. There was a chorus more at ease, more in voice than we have heard this week. The principals ranged from the reliable Sir Joseph Porter of Mr. Moulan and the roistering Dick Deadeye of the inimitable Mr. William Danforth to the arch Miss Kathryn Reece. Would that her top notes bounced over the footlights so successfully as did the pistol which she snatched from Mr. James Montgomery. It fell to the floor and then bounced clean and fine right out into the house.

Mr. Montgomery's Ralph Rackstraw only served to heighten the high reputation he has made for himself this week. His Ralph was not only well sung, but sincerely played and his words clicked out to the top balcony seats. Miss Dean Dickens made her first appearance with the company as Hebe in a red dress and with an assurance which was welcome in a company which has its uncertain and colorless moments.

Performer as an afterpiece (for which purpose it was originally written), Trial By Jury was received by the large audience as the gem of musical satire it is. It is not only a satire on the ways of the law, in which a flirting judge decides a breach of promise suit to his own advantage, but it is a musical joke as well. George Frederick Handel's music is as English as his name is German and in the Entrance of the Judge, "All Hail, Great Judge," Sullivan burlesques his style in a pompous chorus just as the composer of the famed Hallelujah Chorus would have written it.

This double bill which will be repeated twice today is by all odds the best the week has brought us. Let the company "give three cheers and one cheer more" for Messrs Moulan, Danforth and Montgomery.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge Foundation in the Library of Congress presents the Coolidge Quartet Friday night in the Coolidge Auditorium. Program: Quartet in G, Op. 42, No. 3 (Heinrich von Herzogenberg), Trio No.1 Op. 34 (Paul Hindemith), Quartet in E flat, Op. 109 (Max Reger).

It is probable that no other program of chamber music by German composers has ever displayed exactly the same cross-section as the one played last evening by William Kroll, Nickolai Berezovski, Nicolas Moldavan and Victor Gottlieb, for it cut through the three chronological strata of 1884, 1909 and 1924 in such a way as to bring in juxtaposition such disparate composers as Heinrich von Herzogenberg, Max Reger and Paul Hindemith. The first has been almost forgotten, save as a friend of Brahms; the second has not yet received his full meed of recognition, and the third is still writing works by which posterity will judge him.

Only recently has the cause of the rift in the friendship between Brahms and the Herzogenbergs been clarified by biographers. Evidence has been adduced to show that the pride of the Herzogenbergs was deeply wounded by the lukewarm attitude of Brahms toward Heinrich's compositions. Inasmuch as Brahms was usually generously encouraging to merit, this would indicate a disapproval amounting to condemnation. With this in mind, one was prepared to find Herzogenberg's G major quartet dry, academic and boring. On the contrary, it is fresh, romantic and entertaining, though not to the point of excitement.

To a large extent conventional and without marked individuality, the work has a genial, good-humored quality which speaks well for the composer's character. There is life in the music and its spirit is that of the German folk. The andantino particularly has the air of a folk-tale and the menuet is a sturdy dance of the people. There is a pleasing amiability in the writing and a happy emotional flow that leaves an agreeable savor in the memory.

Max Reger's E flat quartet represents his period of maturity, if so precocious a composer can be said to have passed through the usual stages of development. From the beginning there was seriousness in his thought and firmness in his structural form. In this quartet are reflected facets of his individuality; his religious tendencies in the opening movement, which has almost Franckian strains; his poetic invention in the "Quasi Presto," which is a fanciful scherzo; his discouragement in the somewhat pessimistic meditations of the larghetto, and his fund of courage in the spirited finale. Recognition has been slow in coming to Reger, who died while his powers were unimpaired, but time will do him justice.

Paul Hindemith's first trio is now 14 years old and speaks in a style which he no longer practices. It's idiom, however, has the same incisive manner of phrase that is found in his latest works—a positiveness of statement and a clarity of expression that leave no doubt of is sincerity.

Rites Set Monday For Mrs. Cullinan

Funeral services for Mrs. Annie C. Cullinan, 70, will be held Monday at 8:30 a. m. at her home, 3225 Hiatt place northwest, where she died after a short illness Thursday. Requiem mass will follow at the Shrine of the Sacred Heart with burial in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

A native of Harpers Ferry, W. Va., she had lived in Washington for half a century. She was the widow of the late James Cullinan, and is survived by a son, Thomas L. Cullinan; three daughters, Mrs. William J. Rodgers, of Atlantic City, N. J.; Mrs. James R. Enright, of Rockville, Md.; Mrs. Clyde W. Hammerbacher, of Bethesda, Md.; two sisters, Miss Josephine Webber, of Washington, and Mrs. Clegg Bovey, of Hagerstown, Md., and a grandson, James R. Enright, jr.

Humane Society Talk.

Thomas W. Pond, of Baltimore, president of the International Conference for the Investigation of Vivisection, will speak at 8 p. m. today before the Humane Education Society at 1414 Sixteenth street northwest. Plans will be discussed for activities "Be Kind to Animals Week" which begins tomorrow.

Mrs. Rose Buckley Rites Set Monday

Funeral services for Mrs. Rose Buckley, 72, long a Washington resident, will be held at 9 a. m. Monday at St. Mary's Catholic Church. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Mrs. Buckley died Thursday at her home, 716 Sixth street northwest. Born in Maryland, she had lived most of her life in the District and was the widow of James Buckley, a mechanic.

Two daughters, Mrs. Mary C. Drakos and Mrs. Elizbeth Stumph, both of Washington, and two sons, James Buckley, of Washington, and John J. Dolan, a son by a previous marriage, of Silver Spring, Md., survive.

George Washington Lies And Steals, Jury Finds

A petty jury at Upper Marlboro, Md., yesterday decided that George Washington did tell a lie and convicted him of stealing $200 worth of scrap metal from a junk yard at Hyattsville, Md., despite his denial of guilt.

Testimony revealed that George, a colored youth, was also known as James Johnson.

Pump Priming Makes 'Shoddy,' Architects Fear

They Find Pressure Is Put on FHA to Lower Its Standards.

By the Associated Press.

New Orleans, April 22.—The American Institue of Architects in convention today expressed fear that efforts to hasten President Roosevelt's "pump-priming" program would result in the building of "shoddy houses" under the Federal Housing Administration.

The Institue and the Producers' Council, Inc., composed of material and equipment firms and trade associations, adopted a resolution charging "pressure is being brought to bear on the FHA to lower its standards in order to increase the volume of housing to be built."

Charles D. Maginnis, Boston, Mass., was re-elected president of the institute and it was announced the next meeting will be held in Washington in September, 1939, in conjunction with the International Congress of Architects.

The resolution deploring haste in the housing drive said indications were that the speed with which Harry Hopkins' relief program was being pushed was a "definite menace to sound building practices."

Rites for Mrs. Clarvoe Set for This Morning

SEE THESE GRAPHIC PRESENTATIONS

1. "Women in Photography," a fascinating window of photographs of world-famous women, taken by one of Washington's most prominent woman photographers, Miss Peggy Duffy, and including a self-portrait of Miss Duffy herself.
2. "The Greatest of All Careers—Motherhood," a window that portrays all the beauty and tenderness of this finest of all of woman's activities. A glimpse into the very heart of the home—the nursery.
3. "Women in Education." In this dramatic display, you step into the schoolroom where the minds of youth are molded, and the life of the new generation of American citizens is guided by that great woman—the teacher. This window made possible by the cooperation of the Board of Education.
4. "The Highest Paid of All Careers—the Cinema." A Startling window that brings to you an actual "shooting scene" in the filming of Paramount's "Jungle Love." Properties exhibited through the courtesy of the Capital Camera Exchange, Loew's Capitol Theatre and the National Broadcasting Company.
5. "Women in Medicine," a window that portrays the vital importance of women in this most humanitarian of all careers. You'll be amazed by this glimpse into the operating room, with properties and equipment by Beuchler's, Inc., and Garfield Hospital.
6. "Women in Sports," a window dedicated to the women who have given their energy and inspiration to athletic instruction—and to women who have made their marks in sports; in tennis, swimming and golf.
7. "Careers for Women," a display devoted to the great book of one of our most famous Women's Day guests—Mrs. Catherine Filene Shouse, chairman of the board of directors of the Institute of Women's Professional Relations. Mrs. Shouse will be in the store today to autograph her book and to speak to you on women's vocational fields.
8. "Women in Government"—to the thousands of women in Washington today who help to make the wheels of government go 'round! A window that includes an actual continuous moving picture on "What's in a Dress," loaned to us by the Women's Bureau in the United States Department of Labor.
9. "Women in Retailing." A scene familiar to every woman—portraying the vital part played by the woman behind the counter in a great department store. The woman who serves you and makes it possible for you to do your shopping with the ultimate of convenience, and comfort.
